Nazis Cut Holland in Two, Break Past Liege; Railroad Line to Brussels Reported Reached; Roosevelt Plans Expanded Defense Program

Special Message To Congress Will Ask New Arms Outlays

SEE WALTER LIPPMANN'S "The Necessary Plan of American Defense," on Page 11.

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

An extraordinary national defense program, expected in some circles to exceed $500,000,000, was being whipped into shape by Administration officials last night as President Roosevelt acted to speed the Nation's armaments.

Spurred by the advent of total war in Europe, the Chief Executive called in his military and fiscal advisors, and announced through White House Secretary Early that a message would be sent to Congress later in the week proposing a special defense outlay.

From the immediate reaction on Capitol Hill, it seemed clear that strong backing will be given almost anything that may be asked. For more than an hour, Senator after Senator arose in the upper house to demand that military preparations be enlarged.

In Congressional corridors there was also much speculation on means of paying for the additional defense, for a supplemental appropriation of the size contemplated will shoot the ublic debt over the $45,000,000,000 debt limit.

310,000 Troops by August

Amid talk of a special defense tax and diversion of funds budgeted from domestic needs, many Congressmen and officials said privately they favored delaying a decision on how to pay for the arms until next year when the funds would actually be spent.

Meanwhile, Secretary of War Woodring announced that 310,000 troops would be under arms in August, a record peacetime high for summer training mobilization. Practically the entire National Guard and many reserves will join the Regular Army for large-scale maneuvers.

"In the past," Woodring said, "it has been customary to hold maneuvers in only one Army area each year, but in the present state of the world, it is considered advisable to hold maneuvers in all four Army areas this year."

Protesting against "weaknesses" in Army equipment and trained mechanics to produce weapons, Senator Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, demanded a Congressional investigation of the national defense setup to determine a military policy and recommend an expansion program. He introduced a resolution calling for a ten-man joint committee to make the study.

$15,400,000 Requested

During the day, President Roosevelt sent a request for $15,400,000 in supplemental defense appropriations to the House. The amount included $12,500,000 for building up a reserve of strategic war materials—several of which come mainly from the Dutch East Indies—and $2,900,000 for seacoast defenses for the air bases now being built in Puerto Rico.

Rene Pleven, of the Allied Purchasing Mission, announced that or-

The War Today:

Allied and Lowland Armies Withdraw on 250-Mile Front

ALONG A 250-MILE front from Holland's Zuider Zee to the Moselle Valley south of Luxembourg, Dutch, Belgian, British and French armies are withdrawing before the hard-hitting troops of Adolf Hitler.

AS ADVANCE FORCES clashed in spreading battles, the German armies revealed the initial strategy of their offensive—a thrust to cut off the Netherlands from Belgium, and at the same time a turning movement through Belgium toward France.

AT THE NORTHERN END of the line, German troops, the Dutch acknowledged, had cracked Holland's Grebbe Line, the little nation's main defense system.

SOUTH OF THE RIVER, a German column swept west to within 15 miles of Rotterdam, cutting Holland in two.

IN BELGIUM, THE NAZI turning movement, hinging on Liege, ran head-on into a French tank attack, producing the first major battle of "land battleships," and involving some 1,500 to 2,000 machines.

IN LIEGE ITSELF, the Germans claimed, Nazi troops had taken the Citadel, but some of the Liege forts were still resisting. The French insisted the "Liege ring" was still holding up Hitler, as it did the Kaiser for a crucial week in 1914.

IN THE ARDENNES Mountains south of Liege, Allied troops were in sharp contact with the Germans, but were withdrawing, they said, to a predetermined line. The French said they held Longwy, at the junction of the Belgian, Luxembourg and French frontiers, against a German attack.

AT THE SOUTHERN END of the active front, between the northern tips of the Westwall and the Maginot Line, German troops attacked successfully, according to Berlin. They were repulsed, said the French.

MEANWHILE, AS WARPLANES battled overhead, the main bodies of both armies were moving up into what spokesmen for both sides agreed will be the greatest battle of history.

Swastika Tops Belgian Citadel; City Is Entered, Berlin Reports

By Ralph Barnes
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Berlin, May 13.—As the decisive German offensive by land and air went through its grim fourth day, the high command claimed capture of Liege, chief city of the Belgian frontier fortifications, and German advances in Holland so rapid as to foreshadow—if the claims are not exaggerated—the imminent subjugation of the great bulk of that country.

Contact has been established, it was stated, between the German land forces operating to the west of the Sueed-Willems Canal in central Holland, and parachute troops landed in the early phases of the offensive near Rotterdam. The exact point at which the two bodies made contact was not disclosed.

Through a combination of air and land operations, in which the air arm has played the major role, the southern flank of the so-called "Fortress of Holland," including the cities of Utrecht, Amsterdam, The Hague and Rotterdam, has now been turned, according to an authorized commentary.

Parachutists Gain Ground

This commentary makes the additional claim that, largely through the action of troops landed from planes, German arms have secured control of the Dutch sector which extends from The Hague southeastward through Rotterdam to Moerdijk, on the south bank of the largest of the Dutch river estuaries. It was explained that the parachute troops had gained ground from their original landing point.

34 Minutes to London

The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung tomorrow will publish a map pointing out ominously that the distance from the hook of Holland, west of Rotterdam, to Harwich, on the English coast, is only 196 kilometers, and that the distance from Ostend, on the Belgian coast, to London, is only 212 kilometers. In a fast bomber these distances can be covered in 34 and 37 minutes, respectively.

Employing "new methods of warfare," the German forces are crushing all resistance in the Low Countries, especially in Holland, according to the authorized commentary which also said that the remaining Dutch positions in northeastern Holland are being "cleaned up" in a way to complete the occupation

1,500 Tanks Battle for Hours; Enemy Beaten, French Claim

By G. H. Archambault
Copyright by New York Times

Paris, May 13.—For the first time in the history of warfare, tanks have met tanks in a terrific clash of steel—between 1,500 and 2,000 of them. The clash was epic, surpassing anythink the human brain had ever conceived.

The fight lasted for hours, as French armored columns, rushing to the aid of Belgian infantry, made headlong for the German tanks as soon as they were sighted.

The struggle began yesterday and continued for the greater part of today north of Liege in the vicinity of Tongres, Waremme and Saint-Trond, 35 miles east of Brussels, 30 miles northwest of Liege.

The scene was hell itself, with tanks engaging at close range, charging one another, firing projectiles on all sides, with some catching fire and exploding.

French Win Engagement

When the roar of battle ceased the French were masters of the situation and many derelict enemy tanks dotted the field.

[A French broadcast from London, picked up in New York by N. B. C., said later, however, that German troops had cut the main Liege-Brussels railroad. The Associated Press said this report would indicate that the Germans had advanced about 10 miles from the probable scene of the reported tank battle.]

Making full use of armored columns and airplanes, the Germans began a mass attack from Arnhem in the Netherlands to the river Moselle, a front of approximately 200 miles. At all points fighting has been exceedingly fierce.

Allies Fight for Delay

Nevertheless, the great battle has not yet been engaged. The Germans are still bringing up their main bodies, while French, British, Dutch and Belgians are fighting delaying actions at some points and rearguard engagements at others.

The line the Allied high command has set as the limit of its retirement has not yet been reached. Only then will the issue be joined, and tonight there is calm confidence here.

From the latest reliable information available here tonight no line can yet be drawn even approximately to show the respective positions. The fighting still consists of a series of local actions, each of which, however, is increasing both in extent and importance.

Liege in Serious Danger

From the north, Liege is seriously threatened despite the brilliant counter-attack by French tanks described above (here 29

Royal Refugees a Target

Queen, Juliana's Family Escape As Nazis Bomb Rescue Ships

Wilhelmina Guest Of King George After Outwitting Spies

By Thomas C. Watson,
International News Service Staff Writer

London (Tuesday), May 14.—Queen Wilhelmina and the Dutch royal family found haven in London today after narrowly escaping death in a rain of bombs and machine-gun bullets fired at their rescue ships by German warplanes.

The Netherlands government followed the ruling family into exile and transferred its official seat from The Hague to London, indicating the situation in Holland is increasingly grave.

Shaken by her experience, the 60-year-old Dutch Queen arrived in London last night as the guest of Britain's King and Queen following a dash across the English Channel aboard a British warship that was bombed and machine-gunned by pursuing Nazi planes.

The Queen's daughter, Crown Princess Juliana; her husband, German-born Prince Bernhard, and their two baby daughters survived an even more violent attack by some 40 power-diving German planes that lashed at a British warship in a Dutch port just as the royal group was about to board the vessel.

Missing Juliana and her family by only 200 yards, exploding German bombs smashed the end of the pier, killing a man and shaking the royal family severely. The crown princess, who came to England ahead of her mother, had just stepped out of her car at a quayside in Holland and was helping a nurse carry a gas-proof cot, in which 9-month-old Princess Irene was sleeping, when

Government Flees The Hague As Reich Forces Sweep Forward

By Max Harrelson
Associated Press Staff Writer

Amsterdam, May 13.—Outflanked from the north and from the south, with their famous Grebbe water defense line pierced and with Rotterdam threatened by German motor columns but 15 miles away, the Dutch tonight vacated The Hague as a seat of government and sent their queen to safety in England.

The Dutch high command acknowledged in a communique tonight that the Germans had succeeded in taking "a small sector of the Grebbe Line," their main water defense system running south of the Zuider Zee to the Rhine, and that although Netherlands troops by fierce fighting had retaken the sector they could not hold it when the Germans launched fresh attacks.

(The Germans have reported penetrating this line between Amersfoort and Rhenen, about 35 miles east of Amsterdam.)

Pass Moerdijk Bridge

To the south, the high command acknowledged that Germans with motorized equipment had raced through the Langstraat (south of the Maas River) and had reached and passed the Moerdijk Bridge, which crosses the Hollandsch Diep but 15 miles south of Rotterdam.

The swift German column which reached the Moerdijk Bridge, Europe's longest, apparently had cut the Netherlands in two. This bridge spans one of the major estuaries of western Holland, and carries the main railroads linking Rotterdam and Amsterdam with Belgium.

In Rotterdam itself, German parachute and transport-landed troops were admitted still to be holding out "stubbornly."

(The Germans today said "contact" had been established with this Rotterdam force.)

Moreover, the Germans were acknowledged to be in possession of most of the northeast provinces and to have reached the North Sea.

From there, they threatened the huge dam at the mouth of the Zuider Zee, for a march south on Amsterdam. The dam, however, is strongly defended.

Battle at Grebbe Line

The communique said:

"In a small sector of the Grebbe Line, the enemy won territory which was partly recaptured by us, but could not be held after renewed German attacks.

"In the northern provinces the enemy has established itself. In the southern part of Rotterdam, German detachments which are present there are resisting stubbornly.

"German troops reported in the Langstraat have reached Moerdijk Bridge south of Rotterdam, and have passed this bridge."

(Apparently the Germans had reached the Moerdijk Bridge by breaking through the Peel Marsh system of defense to the west of the Maas River near the German frontier. They were reported then to have advanced in rapid stages by way of Tilburg and Hertogenbosch.)

The Germans were spread along the outer fringe of Dutch provinces from the coast on the northeast to the Belgian frontier in the south

Nazi 'Anarchy' Imperils U. S., Hull Warns

Every Individual, State Menaced, Law Society Told

By William V. Nessly

Secretary of State Hull last night pictured this Nation and all others threatened by a "new descent into the conditions of international anarchy" as a result of the aggression overseas.

He told the annual meeting of the American Society of International Law, in denouncing the Nazi government without naming it, that the specter he visioned menaces the civilized existence of every individual as well as every state.

The United States, under the circumstances, has "no choice," he said, "but to expand our program of armament construction to a degree necessary to provide fully adequate means" of defense. He cautioned, however, that "if mankind is to avoid a long continuing period of chaos and retrogression it can only be through the firm establishment of order under law."

Millions, he declared, "stunned by the cruel events which unfold all around them, have become a prey to doubt, hopelessness and despair."

But the Secretary called on all to hold fast to the conviction that "law and morality will triumph over the

Reorganization Of D.C. Opposed By President

Bars Taking Control From Budget Bureau And Accounting Unit

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday gave the death thrust to the emasculated District reorganization bill by advising Congress that he was opposed to any local reform measure which would take the National Capital from the control of the Budget Bureau or the General Accounting Office.

The President's letter to Speaker Bankhead reached the House shortly after it had passed over the Kennedy bill until next District day, May 27. It was referred to the House District Committee.

It came somewhat as a surprise, however, in view of the President's earlier interest in District reorganization and his reappointment of former Commissioner George E. Allen to assist in preparing the legislation for Congress. The revised Kennedy bill was virtually the same measure that was recommended by the Commissioners.

Earlier the House set a new record in cutting District days short by passing six noncontroversial bills in five minutes after devoting most of the afternoon to legisla-

Election-Year Measure

Pensions for Survivors Of Veterans Passed by House

By John B. Oakes

While most members of the "economy bloc" remained silent, the House yesterday passed an election year World War pension bill that would cost the Nation hundreds of millions of dollars.

Caught between the fire of high pressure veterans' organizations on the one hand and antispending sentiment on the other, Republicans and Democrats approved the measure by standing vote, 247 to 31.

The bill, which now goes to the Senate, would grant pensions to the survivors of veterans who had received no injury whatsoever during their wartime service. It also establishes the precedent of pensioning dependent parents of dead veterans.

Under the proposal, some 120,000 dependent widows and children of veterans would be eligible for the new pensions in the first year of operation, and the number would rise until 1968. Nearly 33,000 dependent parents could also receive benefits, but this number would steadily decline. Total cost for the first year might be $48,000,000, it was estimated, and would be expected to rise for at least 25 years.

"This legislation is only a starting point," warned Representative Costello (Democrat), of California, who last year was the sole member to vote against another pension bill. "Every succeeding Congress in an election year is going to feel it has to show it's just as anxious to serve the veterans."

Rep. Clyde Smith's Widow Nominated By Maine G. O. P.

Portland, Me., May 13 (AP).—Mrs. Margaret Chase Smith, 39-year-old widow of Representative Clyde H. Smith (Republican), of Maine's Second Congressional District, won an easy victory today in her quest for the Republican nomination for her husband's unexpired term.

The nomination was virtual assurance that she would become Maine's first Congresswoman at the special election June 3 inasmuch as the Democrats have not entered a candidate.

Virtually complete returns gave her 7,361 votes to 671 for Frederick P. Bonney, Augusta retired businessman.

Mrs. Smith's husband, a few hours before he died, issued a statement asking the voters to "support the candidacy of my wife and partner in public life." She had been his secretary in Washington.

Stocks, Grain Drop At Liquidation Of Dutch Accounts

Stocks, bonds and major commodities fell on American exchanges yesterday in the wake of Nazi successes in the Low Countries and the full impact of the invasion on international economics.

A deluge of liquidation of Dutch accounts sent the New York Stock Exchange into its sharpest decline in two and a half years, reducing the average of 60 representative shares $2.70 to $48.50.

Losses in leaders ranged from $2 to nearly $9 at the finish, with the ticker several minutes behind the closing gong. The session saw a turnover of 2,557,790 shares, the heaviest since September 13.

All grains were off heavily in the commodity markets. Wheat closed 2¾ to 3 cents down; corn was off 1½ to 1⅞, with oats and rye down ⅝ to 3⅛. Extreme weakness in securities and talk of improving domestic crop prospects sent the Chicago pit into a tailspin.

Belgians Offer Enemy 'Stiff Resistance'

Day-Long Offensives Waged by Germans, Communique Reports

By Robert Okin
Associated Press Staff Writer

Brussels, May 13.—The Belgian high command acknowledged tonight that the Germans had waged day-long offensives on the entire Belgian frontier but declared they had been met with "stiff resistance."

Its communique said:

"Throughout the day our troops fought severe combats. Everywhere they put up stiff resistance to the enemy.

"A village which had fallen in the hands of the enemy has been reoccupied after a counter attack by Belgian units supported by tanks.

"During the operations of the last few days, certain infantry units, cyclists, chasseurs in the Ardennes and light motorized troops have particularly distinguished themselves."

An earlier communique indicated Nazi pressure was almost constant. It said engagements had taken place "at diverse points" during Sunday night and that, starting early today, "enemy motorized forces delivered new attacks against all our positions."

It said Belgian troops had maintained their positons "everywhere" against the attacks Sunday night but

British Told To Expect Withdrawals

Churchill Pledges He Will Wage War 'With All Our Might'

By Edwin Stout,
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, May 13.—Great Britain braced herself tonight for "blood, toil, tears and sweat" under the command of Prime Minister Churchill, who pledged "victory at all costs—victory in spite of all terrors."

British troops went into action in the Low Countries, British warships bombarded German air troops on the Lowlands coast, and British planes attacked German communication lines.

Indicative of hard times to come for Britain, an authoritative source warned the folks at home not to be disheartened when they "hear of certain withdrawals." This source declared the Germans apparently are staking "almost everything in an attempt to win the war quickly."

Commons voted unanimous confidence—381 to 0—in Churchill's streamlined government after he told the members the nation was in "the preliminary phases of one of the greatest battles in history."

He, too, warned of grave times to come, but said he was leading the nation with "buoyancy and hope."

Churchill sent the members home until May 21 with the statement

Murder, Family Believes

Charred Body Chained to Auto Identified as Branchville Man

Police were convinced last night that the charred body of a man found chained to an automobile on a roadway in the Agricultural Research Center at Beltsville, Md., early yesterday was that of George Hofmann, 39, of Branchville.

The car in which the body was found, police said, had been identified as belonging to Hofmann, who has been missing since he drove away from his sister's home at Branchville Sunday night.

When the body was discovered by a colored laborer, heavy tire chains were looped around the man's neck and attached to the door jambs on either side of the car. A 5-gallon can, which may have contained gasoline, was found in the rear seat.

Members of the family were convinced Hofmann had been murdered, but could offer no motive. They said he had no enemies, and apparently when he left did not have a large amount of money with him.

"He got too much kick out of life to commit suicide," they said.

Hofmann was employed as a mechanic at the Logan Motor Co.

Hofmann's wife, Mrs. Emma Hofmann, 31, and their son, William, 8, live at 3216 Ash street, Mount Rainier, Md. Mrs. Hofmann told police yesterday she had been separated 21 months from her husband, but that he was on excellent terms with her family and had an engagement to work on her father's automobile Sunday.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

FUDDY-DUDDY: Several days before the last crisis in the British Parliament, high American officials were outspoken, in private conversations, about the need for the replacement of the fine old fuddy-duddy leadership of Prime Minister Chamberlain.

Harlan Miller

* * * *

They wouldn't for worlds be quoted on this, of course.

But at the same time they shrugged, threw their hands in the air, and asked:

"When they oust Chamberlain, whom do the British have to put in?"

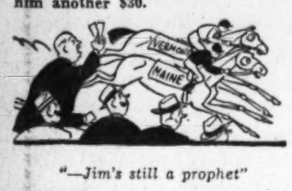
* * * *

FARLEY PREDICTS: Jim Farley won new prestige as a prophet when he told friends at the Kentucky Derby that Gallahadion, a 30 to 1 outsider, would beat Bimelech. Some, who remembered Maine and Vermont, followed his advice.

* * * *

Mr. Farley himself wagered a cool $5 on Gallahadion, and it brought him in some $180.

And in a cautious hedge bet, he wagered $50 on Bimelech, the favorite, to finish second, which won him another $30.



"—Jim's still a prophet"

Friends of Senator Vandenberg are fuming a little at what they call dirty pool by the Dewey forces.

Recently Vandenberg celebrated his fifty-sixth birthday, and a photograph of the occasion appeared in a Milwaukee paper with the inadvertant caption:

* * * *

Immediately afterward reproductions of this erroneous picture and caption, making Vandenberg out to be 10 years older than he really is, flooded the Middle West.

Vandenberg's friends say the Dewey people did the dirty work; but they merely pooh-pooh the idea.

* * * *

WILLKIE BOOM: Thousands of Willkie-for-President petitions have gone out across the land, with blanks for 15 signatures on each.

On the ones from New York is the legend:

"The purpose of this declaration is to dramatize a demand which politicians will heed."

* * * *

But on petitions being sent out from Oskaloosa, Iowa, the legend reads:

"The purpose of this declaration is to dramatize the extent and the strength of the people's demand for Willkie."

* * * *

Why Oskaloosa? Several years ago Fortune Magazine published an excellent article about Oskaloosa as a typical Middle Western town of 10,000.

Now Russell Davenport, former managing editor of Fortune, is one of Willkie's brain-trusters, and he has friends in Oskaloosa, typical Willkie supporters, no doubt.

"—Hans speaks good English"

NAZI APOLOGIST: Recently Hans Thomsen, the icily efficient charge d'affaire of the Nazi Embassy here, spoke to a luncheon gathering of distinguished Washingtonians.

He presented the Nazi viewpoint, of course.

But he spoke off the record, and what he said cannot be repeated here, except that he offered the usual tale of Nazi innocence and the guilt and folly of the Nazis' opponents.

* * * *

In getting an opportunity to speak at all to such a gathering he took advantage, of course, of a code of fair play which Hitler violates and is trying to destroy, a code of decency which must be faintly amusing to Hitler's butcher boys who are not as civilized as Herr Thomsen.

* * * *

At all events, his speech was an ultra-slick performance, a consummate exercise in equivocation, almost too slick. Herr Thomsen has a little trick of hesitating and saying "umh" between phrases, as if choosing his words artistically.

* * * *

There was one occasion, however, when Herr Thomsen (whose English is excellent), did not hesitate, if a current story is true.

He was on the west front during the World War, and during an attack found himself at the mercy of a British soldier whose bayonet was heading toward Herr Thomsen's midrif.

* * * *

"Don't be a damned fool!" exclaimed Thomsen, quick as a flash.

Flabbergasted at hearing perfect English from an officer in a German uniform, the Tommy lowered his bayonet.

Sen. Byrnes Bars Candidacy For 2d Choice

Pepper Urges Farley 'Step Aside' to Unite Party for 3d Term

By Robert C. Albright,
Post Staff Writer

Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, the President's Senate "handy man," yesterday withdrew from the Democratic Vice Presidential race.

Byrnes, often mentioned for second place on a third-term ticket, asked his friends "not to present my name to the State conventions for indorsement for any office."

The South Carolina Democrat is high on the restricted list of those being considered for convention permanent chairman and keynoter. His repudiation of candidate aims heightened prospects of his choice for one of the two important convention roles.

"Draft" Demands More Insistent

The war's spread through the Low Countries meanwhile raised "Draft Roosevelt" demands to a new crescendo. Third-term leaders, encouraged by recent consistent gains, were calling on Postmaster General Farley and all other candidates to "step aside."

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, one of the original "Draft Roosevelt" Senators, publicly urged Farley to declare in a statement that he would not be a candidate but would support his chief for a third term.

"If Jim Farley does that, and I confidently believe that he will, there will be a parade of similar withdrawals by candidates in favor of the President, said Pepper. "Mr. Roosevelt's nomination and election are inevitable. The prodigal sons should return to the fold so the party may join in a united and harmonious convention action."

Won't Take No, Says Sabath

Pepper asserted it was "no longer a question of breaking a tradition, but of Mr. Roosevelt staying in the White House during perilous times."

Representative Sabath (Democrat), of Chicago, a leading third-term exponent, predicted the convention will not "take no" from the President.

"Although he may urge the convention not to nominate him, he will be nominated, and a strong resolution will be adopted stating that in the interest of his country, humanity, not to speak of his party, he must run," Sabath, House Rules Committee chairman, declared.

In New York, Mayor LaGuardia, a former Republican and now a member of the American Labor Party, told a convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, "If Franklin Roosevelt runs, I am going to vote for him."

LaGuardia, like Senator Byrnes, has occasionally been mentioned as a possible Roosevelt running mate.

S. C. Convention Tomorrow

Byrnes' action in renouncing Vice Presidential ambitions followed similar withdrawal by him from the Presidential race several months ago, when he asked the South Carolina Legislature not to indorse him as "favorite son."

Yesterday's statement came on the eve of the South Carolina Democratic convention at Columbia tomorrow.

"Last week, several county conventions recommended that the State convention indorse me for the Vice Presidential nomination," said Byrnes.

"I am deeply appreciative of this action. However, I am not a candidate and I have determined to ask my friends not to present my name to the State convention for indorsement for any office."

Senator Byrnes has never made any statement on a third term, but he is reliably reported to be unopposed. His colleague, Senator Ellison D. "Cotton Ed" Smith, a bitter-end third-term opponent, will go to the South Carolina convention as a delegate from a county favoring another term. A North Carolina New Deal move was reported in progress to deny Smith a place on the State's convention delegate slate.

O'Mahoney Mentioned

Selection of Democratic convention officers, meanwhile, was said to await further conferences between President Roosevelt and Democratic National Chairman Farley. Senate Majority Leader Barkley, who may be convention chairman or keynoter if he wants either, is reported not seeking either role. Besides Byrnes, the names of prominent New Deal Governors of States are being scanned. Others receiving the once-over for keynoter were said to include Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming.

'Red Emma' Goldman Dies At 71 After Long Illness

Hectic Political Career Of U. S. Anarchist Is Ended in Toronto

EMMA GOLDMAN

Toronto (Tuesday), May 14 (AP).—Emma Goldman, internationally-known anarchist, died early today at her home here after an illness of several months.

Miss Goldman, who would have been 71 next June 27, suffered a stroke last February and spent several months in a hospital. Until recently, she had appeared to be improving in health, however.

Emma Goldman, a philosophical anarchist, became known as "Red Emma" on both sides of the Atlantic because of her constant preaching of a social revolution.

She always denied that she advocated violence, but from the time of the Chicago Haymarket bombings on May Day, 1886, until the United States entered the World War in April, 1917, her name was linked, directly or indirectly, with almost every major instance of violence against the existing order that took place in this country.

Deported in December, 1919, after serving a short prison term for obstructing the World War draft, she was sent to her native Russia. She soon fell out with the Soviet leaders, denounced Bolshevism as tyrannical and spent the following years wandering restlessly about Europe, always casting a longing eye toward America's shores.

Born in Kovno, Russia (now in Lithuania), June 27, 1869, the daughter of a Russian Jewish family, she came to this country with her family when she was 15 years old.

For making speeches "urging revolution, violence and bloodshed" in connection with the Debs railway strike of 1893, she was arrested in New York and served seven months on Blackwells Island. Part of the time she was in the dungeon because of trouble with the head matron.

On September 6, 1901, Leon Czolgosz shot President McKinley at Buffalo, N. Y. In his confession, the assassin said he had been influenced by the writings of Emma Goldman. She was arrested and questioned for two weeks.

Convicted of obstructing the World War draft, Miss Goldman was fined $10,000 and sentenced to two years in Jefferson City, Mo.

Upon release deportation proceedings were brought.

Because the United States had no diplomatic intercourse with the Soviet Union, Miss Goldman and other Russian deportees were disembarked in Finland. A few days later they went by train to Russia and were given an official welcome.

But six months later she was quoted in dispatches as saying that bolshevism was "rotten" and she wrote to her niece in Rochester, N. Y., that the system had taken away all freedom from the Russian people. Within a year she had quarreled with Lenin and Trotzky and fled to Berlin.

In September, 1924, English recognition of Russia gave her a passport visa which enabled her to enter England. She was there for months as a lecturer "consecrated to the exposure of the Bolshevist myth."

Miss Goldman's next appearance came in March, 1932, when she visited Copenhagen.

Her antipathy to bolshevism was based upon a conclusion that the system had given "unhappy Russia a far worse tyranny than under the czar."

Ramspeck Seeks to Provide Club Center for U. S. Workers

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

A community center for Government workers, with an off-the-job welfare program beyond anything now available, has been proposed in a bill introduced by Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia.

The proposal came out of an informal discussion among a score or more key Government officials, and was introduced at their request. Representative Ramspeck said he had not yet studied the chance of getting the measure passed this session.

Outline of the plan is to set up a corporation, the Association of Government Employes, staffed by men from Government agencies, with a large permit for conducting recreation, education, and other welfare activities.

There would be no connection between the working Government and the proposed corporation, according to its sponsars, except that the same people would be members of each.

The corporation would be self-supporting, and take no Government funds. It would be nonpolitical, and would take no part in problems now the concern of employe unions.

Daniel W. Bell, undersecretary of the Treasury, and one of the sponsors, said that while the details of the program have not been worked out, the plan eventually would call for a Washington club building for the association, with offices, clubrooms and recreation facilities.

The corporation, he said, is planned, not as a Government organization, but an employe organization, "different from anything else," and not a union "in any sense."

Bell said that if the legislation went through at this session, the corporation could be organized during the summer and fall, and operating by the end of the year.

Th club's actvities would include education, chraity, recreation, athletics, health, mutual benefit and cooperative activities. A part of the corporation's purpose would be "to encourage and promote the highest standards of service among officers and employes of the Government."

This last job, said Bell, would be done mostly by giving Government employes and officials a center for after-hours discussion of their own problems. The "shop talk" forums would, however, be open for any topics that the members wanted to talk about.

More encouragement for the "highest standards of service" would come through a magazine and other publications authorized in the bill.

Ramspeck's bill lists as officers of the proposed corporation:

Undersecretary Bell; William H. McReynolds, administrative assistant to the President; Marcellus C. Sheild, clerk of the House Committee on Appropriations; Malcolm Kerlin, administrative assistant to the Secretary of Commerce; Ebert K. Burlew, First Assistant Secretary of Interior; W. Ashley Jump, Agriculture budget officer; F. J. Bailey, assistant director of the Budget Bureau; James V. Bennett, director of the Bureau of Prisons; John R. Demorest, budget division chief in the Labor Department; Harold W. Breining, assistant administrator of veterans' affairs, and Maurice Collins, executive assistant to the Federal Security administrator.

Personnel directors in the Government agreed yesterday to step out of their official roles and stage a two-way debate in a proposed independent appeals system for employes.

The debate will start at 10 a. m. today before the Ellender committee investigating civil service. Chairman Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, told 30 personnel men about the debate plan, and invited those favoring an independent appeals board to raise their hands.

Not a hand showed. O liver C. Short, of the Commerce Department, however, volunteered to argue in favor of it, and several others agreed to join his debate team for today.

Senate Agrees To Vote Today On CAA Shift

Both Proponents And Opponents Predict Victory

With both sides predicting victory, the Senate agreed yesterday to vote not later than 4 p. m. today on President Roosevelt's proposal to abolish the Air Safety Board and transfer the Civil Aeronautics Authority to the Department of Commerce.

Meanwhile, Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, declared if his resolution disapproving the CAA shift is defeated, the way would be paved for attempts to destroy the independent status of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

McCarran Charges Pressure

McCarran also predicted that a proposal to take the Forestry Service from the Agriculture Department and put it into the Interior Department would follow closely the CAA transfer.

"I know that an executive order putting the Forest Service under Interior is ready, but it probably would not be offered if I am sustained in the fight against reorganization of the CAA," McCarran declared.

The Nevadan charged that more pressure has been exercised and "there has been more 'submarining' over the CAA row than over any other bill I can remember, including the Supreme Court reorganization bill."

Maloney Favors Shift

While McCarran said he had an "ample margin" of votes against the President's plan, Administration leaders predicted that the executive order would be sustained. Some proponents of reorganization claimed a majority from three to eight votes.

On the Senate floor yesterday, McCarran declared that the present war shows the importance of independent control of aviation; but Senator Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut, expressed himself heartily in accord with the President.

Maloney contended that the President had shown courage in proposing CAA reorganization in view of the probability of criticism of the move.

Chairman Bailey of the Commerce Committee said he would vote for the President's order because he felt it necessary to repair the damage done by a previous reorganization order affecting certain internal changes in the CAA.

Lo, Poor Mailman! Carfare, Bike Fund For Carriers Gone

By the Associated Press

Things slowed down to a walk in some of the Nation's postoffices yesterday—the carfare and bicycle money gave out.

W. W. Howes, retiring First Assistant Postmaster General, blew the whistle from the Capital:

"Attention of all postmasters at first and second-class post offices is invited to the fact that the department's appropriation for carfare and bicycle allowance for the current fiscal year is exhausted."

A big Christmas business ate into the department's $1,325,000 appropriation for carfare and bicycle allowance for the year ending July 1.

Postmen will have to get up earlier in some places and walk a little faster, or shell out themselves until the department gets some more money on July 1.

$63,887 Now Given to Drive For Symphony

Last of 3 Report Luncheons to Be Held on Thursday

Volunteer campaigners for the $107,600 minimum fund required to carry the National Symphony Orchestra through another season, yesterday reported a total of 2,595 pledges amounting to $63,887.02.

The final of three report luncheons will be held at 12:30 Thursday.

A. F. E. Horn, campaign chairman, spoke optimistically to the workers yesterday. He said he was confident the goal would be reached and probably exceeded. Many subscribers have increased their gifts above those for last year, he told the workers.

59% of Quota

The amount reported at the first meeting, last Thursday, was $43,968.78, from 1,316 pledges.

The special gifts committee, with a quota of $61,500, yesterday reported a total of 230 pledges for $36,439.50, or 59.25 per cent of the quota.

Other units reported, as follows: Business and Professions ($14,000 quota), 259 pledges, $4,958.50; Army ($1,500 quota), 263 pledges, $743.48; Associations ($7,500 quota), 422 pledges, $5,900.25; Education ($4,000 quota), 512 pledges, $1,936.64; Government ($7,000 quota), 150 pledges, $2,380.25; Navy ($3,500 quota), 110 pledges, $2,449.25; Orchestra Guild ($6,500 quota), 505 pledges, $7,459.35; Suburban ($2,500 quota), 144 pledges, $1,619.80.

Pledges Exceed Last Year's

To date, the workers have obtained 1,751 more pledges than were secured at this time last year. The money increase over this campaign date of last year was given as $5,129.89.

At the speakers table yesterday were Edward J. Noble, Undersecretary of Commerce; Charles W. Eliot 2d, Mrs. Archibald McLeish, Dr. John R. Steelman, Merlin Crawford, James Arcaro, George Gaul and Mrs. Lawrence Townsend.

A membership was announced as sent in by the Chambersburg, Pa., Hans Kindler Club.

Roosevelt Plans Defense Message

ders for about $150,000,000 in warplanes and engines have been placed with American plants within the past two weeks, bringing the total of last month to $350,000,000.

The $150,000,000 in contracts not previously announced went to the Lockheed, Consolidated and Martin companies. Pleven said that additional contracts are nearing completion for North American and Boeing models, and that the latter would approximate $25,000,000.

Message Still Unwritten

President Roosevelt, Early emphasized, has not yet drafted his defense recommendations to Congress. He has the reports of military attaches on the lessons of the war before him and with the assistance of his chief military advisers will determine Army-Navy needs in the light of recent developments.

Secretary Woodring, Secretary Morgenthau, Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson, and Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, held a long conference with the President. Later in the day, Secretary of the Navy Edison and Assistant Secretary Lewis Compton visited the White House, and on leaving Edison told reporters he had assured Mr. Roosevelt that the shipbuilding program was proceeding as fast as possible.

The House Naval Affairs Committee, however, will call naval officials before it this morning to determine if construction of warships and naval planes cannot be speeded. Chairmen Vinson and May of the House naval and military committees will go to the White House later in the day.

Discuss Naval Planes

Vinson and Chairman Walsh of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee have been conferring with naval officials on plans for launching a large naval plane building program. They indicated they had been motivated by Secretary Edison's recent statement that the British defeat in Norway showed that more planes should be added to the American Navy.

Walsh said the President's supplemental defense program would include $46,000,000 for starting work on 43 warships now authorized plus 21 others included in a pending bill.

The impression in official circles, however, was that Army needs will be emphasized in the forthcoming message. War Department heads have been urging that the Nation's chief defense requirements are additional antiaircraft, antitank and machine guns, more semiautomatic rifles and other equipment required for an army of 1,000,000 men.

The importance of air power in the war has made an increase in the Army Air Corps and naval aviation almost a certainty in any new defense program.

Hughes Urges All to Back Red Cross

Capper Joins Chief Justice in Appeal, Juliana Sends Thanks

Charles Evans Hughes, Chief Justice of the United States, and Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, yesterday joined in appeals for contributions to the $10,000,000 Red Cross war relief campaign.

At the same time, Princess Juliana, head of the Netherlands Red Cross, cabled her thanks for $100,000 sent the organization by the American Red Cross, and the Belgian Red Cross expressed "profound gratitude" for a similar gift.

Chief Justice Hughes, who is vice president of the American Red Cross, declared in his plea to the people of the Nation:

"Immediate response to the Red Cross appeal will insure prompt aid for those afflicted, brave and courageous people who have been so brutally attacked.

"The proven impartiality of the Red Cross, and its efficiency in giving help, and its position as the official voluntary relief organization of our government, entitles it to the Nation's generous support."

Senator Capper urged a "prompt and generous response to the needs of the homeless, hungry and orphaned," declaring that "as one of the few remaining nations enjoying the security of peace in a world of chaos, we are in a position to extend a strong hand of sympathy."

Among donations received here yesterday by national headquarters were $1,200 from the Canal Zone chapter, and $2,500 from B'nai B'rith, national Jewish fraternal organization.

At the Red Cross convention here last week it was revealed that $1,437,717 had already been spent for war relief abroad, including $500,000 for Polish refugees, $250,000 for Finland, $25,000 for Norway, $100,000 for England, and $75,000 for France.

The District Red Cross, seeking to raise $150,000 as its quota of the national drive, announced yesterday that $7,618 had been received. Bruce Baird, president of the National Savings and Trust Co., who is chairman of the District campaign, appointed Admiral Charles Conard, U. S. N., retired, as executive vice chairman and Miss Mabel T. Boardman as vice chairman in charge of special gifts and booths.

The following contributions have been received here for the fund up to date:

Mrs. Dwight Davis, $2,000; Miss Mabel T. Boardman, $1,250; Dwight Davis, $1,000; Mrs. F. A. Keep, $1,000; Mrs. James Parmelee, $1,000; Miss Helen Brooks Davis, $500; Miss Margaret W. Beriberi, 'Oriental' Disease, Is Afflicting Many Alcoholics in U. S., Scientists Are Told Beriberi, ancient disease of the Orient and commonly associated with the eating of polished rice, flourishes in America and other Occidental nations and may be caused by quantity consumption of alcoholic beverages, a Harvard Medical School scientist told the eighth American Scientific Congress here yesterday.

The manifestations, causes and cures of the disease were described by Dr. Soma Weiss, who spent five years studying its victims in the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, Boston.

The gathering of 1,500 scientists and scholars held 11 scientific sessions in as many places in the city yesterday afternoon to consider Pan-American problems in fields ranging from anthropolgy and public health to economics and law.

In the morning a full session heard Secretary of State Cordell Hull assail "some nations" in which "science has been reduced to the sorry estate of a handmaiden of oppression and brute force."

ADD ONE SCIENCE .....

Beriberi is manifested, Dr. Weiss said, by swelling of the limbs, increase in the rate of heart beat and ultimate enlargement of the organ, a speedy gain in weight of from 30 to 40 pounds and multiple neuritis.

The disease is quite common, he said, among alcoholics, whose consumption of intoxicants provides them with an abundance of calories and fattens them without giving necessary vitamins. Similarly, he said, the diets of low-income groups in the Americas, characterized by large amounts of bread and potatoes, fail to provide sufficient vitamins and tend to establish predispositions to the disease.

Relief and cure of sufferers, he said, was effected by administration of thiamin.

"Today we witness a stark demonstration of the possibilities of antisocial and antimoral use of the achievements of science," Secretary Hull earlier told the congress.

Hull absolved scientists of blame and declared creation of conditions favorable to constructive scientific progress to be "a task for all mankind."

"Not even science," he said, "can be expected to survive a too protracted and too widespread abuse of the achievements of science for antisocial and antimoral ends."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Heinrich Simon gives an illustrated lecture on Richard Strauss on Monday evening in the Washington College of Music.

Characterizing Richard Strauss as "a modernistic classicist," Dr. Heinrich Simon lectured last evening on that composer for an interested group in the Washington College of Music. The phrase is a happy one applied to a tone-poet who in his early youth thought that Brahms was too radical in tendency, only gradually overcame his distaste for Wagner, and then developed into an innovator of the boldest type without once losing his respect for the fundamentals of tradition. At the height of his creative power he was the personified paradox of a romantic realist.

BROWN

Enlivening his informal talk with personal reminiscences of his contacts with Strauss, Dr. Simon outlined the background from which the composer emerged and the influences which molded his artistic constitution. Primary among these influences he placed the milieu of southern Bavaria in which Strauss was born, pointing out the fortunate blend of rural and urban elements which marked the Munich of the late nineteenth century. To this admixture he attributed the contradictory tendencies of naivete and sophistication, of sentiment and irony which are traceable in the music of Strauss.

As an analyst of the Straussian temperament, he found as its dominant trait the pride of one who felt that the artist is an aristocrat by the very nature of his profession. It was this pride, he said, which was sometimes mistaken for an arrogance of which Strauss was incapable because of his essential sincerity. He emphasized the fact that it was Strauss the aristocrat who worked out a distinctive style, and Strauss the bourgeois who went to the primal and simple emotions for the warp of his most complex scores.

At the piano Dr. Simon illustrated the classic simplicity of Strauss by playing the prelude to "Ariadne auf Naxos." The humorous fantasy and the nostalgic gemuethlichkeit were exemplified in two-piano versions of "Till Eulenspiegel" and the waltzes from "Der Rosenkavalier," in which he was assisted by Fanny Amstutz Roberts.

Red Cross Buys Hospital Supplies For the Lowlands

The purchase of a quantity of ambulances, field hospital units, hospital trucks and surgical instruments for war relief work in Belgium and the Netherlands was announced Sunday by Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross.

Speaking of the Cross campaign for a $10,000,000 war relief fund, Davis said that the response "has been marvelous."

He added that the organization had on order at the present time 150 fast, air-conditioned ambulances and was making arrangements to buy 100 auxiliary hospital trucks.

3 in Congress Among 92 Fixing Traffic Tags

The names of three Congressmen were included yesterday among those whose traffic tickets were "fixed" over the past week and thus became represented in Maj. Ernest Brown's "traffic primer."

The "Primer" issued yesterday made up in numbers what it lacked in originality of excuses as the total of tickets fixed leaped to 92, including 11 cancelations and 81 warnings.

Representative John Lesinski, of Michigan, escaped with a warning when he explained that he was on official business when he parked too close to the corner. Representative Thomas Ford, of California, also got off with a warning for obstructing a sidewalk because he said he was getting some papers to be used on the floor of Congress. Representative Charles Kramer, of California, was pardoned for obstructing a crosswalk.

Four Plead Unfamiliarity

Among the unoriginal reasons given which worked, were 11 who claimed their cars had either been pushed or disabled. Four pleaded that they were unfamiliar with local traffic regulations and two argued they were on official business. Four doctors said they were answering emergency calls, including the Police Department's own surgeon, Dr. Fred Y. Williamson, of 3619 Legation northwest.

Dr. Williamson explained he was getting a prescription for a policeman and got off with a warning.

Three persons escaped through diplomatic immunity. Congressmen intervened to arrange "fixings" in three cases.

Rev. George G. Oliver, of Arlington, Va., was let off with a warning when he explained that he was attending a church service.

Merrimon B. Brooks, of 1374 Kenyon street northwest, said he was attending a funeral; Louise M. Horton, 5301 New Hampshire avenue northwest, said she parked too long because she lost her keys. William Gilliam, 2400 Wisconsin avenue northwest, said he was "assisting firemen."

Representative Frank W. Boykin, of Alabama, arranged a warning for a secretary in his office, Katherine Shreve, of 19 I street northwest. Miss Shreve said she was on official business.

Representative Colgate W. Darden, of Virginia, performed a similar favor for Milton J. Hubbard, of Norfolk, Va., who parked over time, and Representative Wirt Courtney, of Tennessee, took care of Eugene M. Williams, 2901 Eighteenth street northwest.

Those who escaped under diplomatic immunity were: Otto Ratje, 1439 Massachusetts avenue northwest, German Embassy; Isabel Poate, 2127 California street northwest, British Embassy, and Ralph W. Dorins, 1737 H street northwest.

neither communique gave details on the outcome of today's assaults.

With British and French troops alongside the Belgians in the front lines, optimism appeared buoyed after the first impact of the Nazi blitzkrieg offensive and experienced observers here said the outcome still was in the balance.

The joint British-French-Belgian command established an inter-Allied censorship in Belgium.

As refugees streamed south and west from the fighting zones United States Ambassador John Cudahy consulted with Belgian Red Cross officials.

He said the feeding and housing of the Belgian war homeless already was a tremendous job and funds were needed.

The Belgian government was prepared for flight itself, if necessary, but officials said that Brussels was in no immediate danger from land attack.

Behind the lines Belgian troops were kept busy mopping up German parachute troops dropped in widely scattered areas during the week-end.

German aerial activity was heavy, and troop concentrations and lines of communication were subjected to a heavy rain of bombs.

It was officially estimated that 20 Nazi planes had been shot down over Belgian territory yesterday, and at least 100 Saturday.

Nazis Report Liege Entered, Citadel Taken

of the whole eastern shore of the Zuyder Zee. The drive in the north of Holland suggests that soon Amsterdam may be threatened from across the dam at the mouth of the Zuyder Zee.

Albert Canal Crossed

Meanwhile the right wing of the German forces operating in northeastern Belgium have forced their way across the Albert Canal, northwest of Hasselt, it was claimed. The authorized commentary asserted that since two days ago, other German troops crossed the canal and broke through between Hasselt and Maastricht, further to the southeast, this key factor in the Belgian defense system can now be said to have crumbled.

"Liege has fallen" reads the red type streamer headline on the front page of the Voelkischer Beobachter. The supreme command announced that the swastika was hoisted over the citadel after German troops had forced their way into the city this morning.

The claims thus far are to the capture only of the citadel and "the strongest of the Liege forts." It was conceded that the system of forts in the Liege area "is not yet completely paralyzed."

Ludendorff Recalled

The claim to the capture of Liege recalls the action in August, 1914, which brough renown to Erich Ludendorff. As staff officer he led a commanderless division between the Liege forts, and took the city by surprise. Using their centimeter howitzers, the Germans required 12 days to reduce the Liege forts in the last war.

The supreme command claimed that French forces encountered west of the Ourthe River in southern Belgium, had been "thrown back," and that "our divisions" in that sector are advancing rapidly and attaining their objectives.

The first hint that the German people have had that fighting has been in progress between the armies of the Maginot Line and the West Wall was contained in a single sentence in the bulletin of the supreme command this afternoon. The sentence read:

"South of Saarbrucken and southeastward of Zweibruecken our positions were pushed forward (yesterday) and in the process several hundred prisoners were taken."

The German official news agency, DNB, put the number of prisoners as 600.

Surrender of 18,000 Claimed

The official communique today claimed the surrender near Tilbury, the Netherlands, of a Dutch general, his staff and 18,000 men.

The supreme command announced that in the air operations yesterday 320 Allied planes were destroyed, bringing the total Allied losses for the three days, according to the German claim, to 943 planes. The official news agency reported that an additional 100 had been accounted for today.

Air operations over the sea resulted, according to the supreme command, in the sinking off the Dutch coast of a 9,100-ton British cruiser of the Southampton class, and a British destroyer off Narvik, and several transports.

Dr. ZeBarney T. Phillips, chaplain to the Senate, will conduct the services. Honorary pallbearers include Don Felipe A. Espil, the Argentine ambassador; Don Juan Francisco de Cardenas, Spanish ambassador; William Munthe de Morgenstierne, Norwegian minister; Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan; Capt. George D. Murray, U. S. N.; George Garrett, Sir Willmott Lewis, Capt. L. C. A. St. J. Curzon-Howe, R. N., F. R. Noyer Millar, and L. McCormich-Goodhart.

French Win Great Tank Battle North of Liege

words were deleted by the censor).

(A German military statement said German and enemy tanks fought a battle northwest of Liege and that the Allied tanks were repulsed. German planes participated in the encounter, the Germans said.)

All the forts forming the defense of Liege were attacked today by heavy artillery, Berlin claims the Germans have taken several, but information here is that none had fallen when the latest reports were received this evening. Berlin speaks of having taken the "citadel," but it is explained here that the Liege Citadel does not form part of the ringe of forts. The Eben-Emael fort, taken by the Germans, is outside the fortified belt. It was built to defend the Albert Canal at its junction with the Meuse River (here 32 words censored).

Battle at Ardennes

Equally violent was the fighting today in the Ardennes to the south of Liege. For the moment the Germans seem to have concentrated their main striking force there—several divisions with many armored units. The Belgians are withdrawing under the protection of the French advanced guards which all day fought delaying actions.

The line of German advance from Neufchateau is two-fold—westward and southwestward, both in the direction of the Maginot Line. The fighting here cannot be separated from actions on the French frontier.

The French sent into the Belgian Ardennes and Luxembourg are advancing guards consisting of (here three words censored) units which had occupied positions along the border for many months in the Ardennes. In the Ardennes this advance guard after fighting delaying actions fell back on French soil as far as the Meuse which, says tonight's communique, was "reached by the enemy on part of its course."

This pressure coincided with a very strong attack further to the east on Longwy, a small town in the outworks of the Maginot Line. The attack had been heralded by intense artillery preparation; the fighting continued during the greater part of the day and by nightfall, says the communique, "the attacks had been repulsed."

The Germans launched attacks also east of the Moselle and in the region o fthe Saar River, but were driven back.

Managed Like Cavalry

The conditions of the tank battle west of Liege make it clear that the engines on both sides were light and medium tanks. Not long ago this correspondent watched French tanks in a sham fight which revealed remarkable mechanical suppleness and immediate response to commands. The methods employed cannot be revealed but they are so efficient that the tanks maneuvered with as much ease as cavalry and their evolutions left the spectators marveling.

What occurred near Tongres may be gathered from the statement then made by a senior officer:

"We shall go into action just as if we were light cruisers at sea sighting an enemy. Our tactics are summarized in the words 'immediate attack and rapidity of fire.' This means, of course, highly trained crews and the promptest decision on the part of their leaders.

"A battle between tanks will be short and the formation adopted at the outset will be decisive because there will be no opportunity to correct mistakes. The clash will be mighty and the outcome of that first battle will prove whether our tactics are right. I believe they are. May the day come soon when we shall see."

Never were the laws of relativity more applicable than in considering the battle which is only taking shape in the Low Countries. The highest military circles here lay stress on this point which should be self-evident even to an amateur student of modern warfare.

Generals' War Now

In brief a sudden change has come over the character of the operations. Since mid-October it had remained a second-lieutenant's war—guerilla raids, Red Indian ruses—where a party of 20 men counted as a force. Between the Maginot Line and the Westwall no action exceeded a skirmish.

Today it is a generals' war waged in terms of divisions—and a division means 15,000 men. So that on the fourth day of the new war of movement local action, even though violent and deadly, must be considered only as incidents in a struggle developing along a front of more than 500 miles, from the mouth of the Ems in the North Sea to the Swiss border. Moreover these actions must not be isolated from the general situation.

The past three days have seen the beginning of "the battle of the frontiers," such as was fought in the early days of war in 1914. Neither in Holland nor in Belgium was it ever intended to engage in a general battle on the frontier itself.

Tactically, the forces of the Low Countries—some 30 divisions at the maximum—could not hope to cope with an enemy disposing 160 divisions. Strategically, the Allies by the force of circumstances—primarily because of scrupulous respect for neutrality until the very last minute—were compelled to prepare for a defensive battle. This means that the enemy must be allowed to show his hand before his thrust can be parried. Only then can they resort to a counter offensive.

It is recalled that "the battle of the frontiers" in 1914 lasted five days and that it was followed by a general retreat in preparation for the Battle of the Marne which lasted a full week and that the latter in its turn was followed by "the race to the sea." History may repeat itself.

In any case the German high command has not yet revealed the location or mission of its main body. At no point has it lifted the veil. The Allies must be vigilant at all points without engaging their forces decisively at any one.

Yet there is a general impression here—and it is hoped that it may prove correct—that the Germans have launched an offensive of such a nature that it will not end until a decision has been obtained.

Italians Held Aiming to Keep Balkan Peace

Would Need Supply Source If She Enters War, Experts Claim

By C. L. Sulzberger
Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, May 13.—There is a growing conviction in the Balkans that Italy will oe in the war very soon, but there is hope that this area will not be attacked—at least for a while.

The general impression was that Rome will throw in its lot with Berlin in a desperate push to the west and against Egypt. Italian sources support this impression and admit that the western part of Italy's Libya, including almost all of Tripolitana, may oe lost at the same time to French troops moving from Tunis.

According to Italians here, 60 per cent of Italy's imports come through Gibraltar and 20 per cent through Suez. For this reason, it is believed Italy will do all it can to keep peace in the Balkans in order to find supply sources if she enters the war and the entrances to the Mediterranean are blocked. Of course what the Allies and Turkey may do if Italy becomes a belligerent will have great importance here.

700,000 Troops Ready

Belgrade, May 13 (AP).—Authoritative Yugoslav quarters declared today they had taken all precautions, including the placing of 700,000 troops on a combat footing, to protect the country should Italy enter the war.

These sources said anti-British demonstrations in Italy confirmed the Yugoslav government's fears that Italy would fight on the side of Germany. In this event, they said, both Yugoslavia and Greece would be in immediate danger of invasion.

Yugoslav government circles dropped the appearance of outward calm of recent weeks based upon Fascist assurances that Italy would press no territorial claims against Yugoslavia.

Reliable sources reported:

Strongest concentrations of Yugoslav troops are along the Italian and German frontiers in the north, but the Adriatic coast down to Italian Albania has not been neglected.

Additional divisions have been sent to the border of Hungary, through which Yugoslavs fear Germany might drive.

Border Fortified

Work has been intensified on all border fortifications.

The Yugoslav air force is maintaining all-day patrols over the Adriatic to watch Italian warship movements.

The strengthening of Yugoslav suspicion of Italy is believed to be based on purportedly outspoken Fascist aspirations to acquire the entire Dalmatian coastline along the Adriatic, of which Italian spokesmen have often said they were "cheated" by France and Britain when dividing the spoils after the last World War.

Budapest reports today admitted that Hungarian reservists had been called up for "May training."

Hull Sees Peril To U. S. in Nazi 'Aggression'

Talk to Law Parley Warns of Threat Of World 'Anarchy'

The text of Secretary Hull's address to the American Society of International Law last night follows:

Fellow members and guests of the American Society of International Law: I am deeply appreciative of the privilege of serving as president of this society and of opening its thirty-fourth annual meeting.

All of us who, as students or practitioners, are interested in this particular branch of jurisprudence, are profoundly conscious of the fact that today the subject of international law has an extraordinary significance. It is no exaggeration to say that never before, in the history of the human race, has the problem of the preservation and development of order under law presented itself with such urgent acuteness. Never before has it been so fraught with import for the future of mankind.

Protest of Anarchy

The concept and the structure of a law of nations rose and evolved out of a spirit of protest against the ravages of international anarchy. In the ancient world and during the Dark Ages of the modern world there widely prevailed a concept that each nation was a law unto itself, the sole arbiter of its international conduct, fully entitled—if it possessed sufficient strength—to engage in aggression and aggrandizement, to destroy by armed force the independence of other nations and to subjugate other peoples. Force reigned supreme. Human liberty, national independence, confidence in safety and security on the part of nations and individuals were in constant jeopardy.

Over long centuries, voices raised in protest against the nightmare of international lawlessness grew in strength and influence, and ideas of how to achieve a law-governed world emerged more and more. Three hundred years ago the genius of Hugo Grotius gathered these scattered voices and ideas into a sharp focus and gave powerful impetus to a new spirit, to a more and more insistent demand that relations among nations be based upon acceptance and application of well-defined rules of international conduct—upon a body of international law.

Impairs Own Well-Being

Since then enormous advances have been made in the character of relations among nations. There has been an ever-deepening and ever more widespread recognition of the inescapable fact that an attitude of unbridled license on the part of nations—in the same way that such an attitude on the part of individuals or groups within nations—is bound, sooner or later, to impair their own well-being and, in the end, lead them to destruction. There has been a wider and wider acceptance and application of the all-important fact that true social progress is possible only when nations in their relations with each other, as well as individuals and groups within nations, are willing to practice self-restraint and to cooperate for the greater good of all. Only thus can orderly processes exist and provide that social stability, security and confidence without which individual liberty and a free play of creative forces must necessarily be precarious, and the onward march of man must be halting if not altogether impossible.

Institutions have been built up to give effect and reality to order under law within and among nations. They have been largely responsible for the flowering of our modern civilization in the spheres of political security, social justice, scientific progress and economic betterment.

This progress has not been achieved without stupendous effort. There have been interruptions and setbacks. Frequently forces have arisen which have challenged the very concept of order under law, especially in the sphere of international relations, and have plunged nations into war, the greatest of all deterrents to human progress.

Attests Rise to Light

That these challenges and the conditions of international lawlessness which they created have not been permanent setbacks is proof of the inherent vitality and virility of the great principles underlying the whole concept of world order under international law. These facts attest the indomitable strength of the spirit which has been the great driving force behind the determination of the human race to rise from the darkness of lawlessness to the light of law.

Today mankind is the unhappy victim of another challenge of this sort—a powerful challenge which threatens to wipe out the achievements of centuries in the development of international law and to destroy the very foundations of orderly international relationships. In the face of this challenge it is of the utmost importance that every citizen visualize clearly the cardinal features of international law and of order based on law, as well as the conditions which would prevail if they were destroyed.

Order under law in the relations between and among nations requires scrupulous respect for the pledged word. It requires fulfillment of obligations. Without these the whole fabric of mutual trust and, in fact, of civilized existence, must crash to the ground. Without confidence that a promise made by a nation will be kept and that an obligation assumed by a nation will be honored, international relationships become reduced to the level of the jungle.

Order Entails Security

Order under law in international relations requires that nations respect each other's independence. Unless all nations—large and small—can consider themselves secure in this respect, they must continually live in fear of being confronted with the tragic alternatives of abject submission or armed resistance. National effort must then either be half-hearted in the shadow of ever-present dread or be increasingly diverted from activities for the advancement of national welfare to the intensive creation of means of defense.

Order under law in international relations requires that disputes among nations be settled by none but pacific means, and that treaties and agreements, once entered into, be revised by none but methods of peaceful adjustment. It is necessary, as all right-thinking people agree, to the peace and tranquility of the body politic of a well ordered state that individuals shall refrain from self-help and the employment of force and shall settle their differences by peaceful methods and, when necessary, by the judicial process. It is no less necessary, if we are to have an orderly international society—a society capable of rendering the greatest amount of good to the greatest number of people—that members of the family of nations shall be governed by similar processes for the settlement of their differences.

For centuries efforts have been made to banish the use of armed force as an instrument for settling disputes and revising treaties and agreements. Extensive machinery of judicial procedure, of conciliation, of mediation and of arbitration has been built up for this purpose. The efficacy of this machinery has been amply demonstrated. It would suffice, if all nations would but resolve to have full recourse to it. Only by sincere determination to perfect it and to use it can mankind hope to relegate the international anarchy of war to the limbo of things forgotten.

Fair Dealings Essential

Finally, if order under law is to be stable and effective, it is essential that trade and other economic relationships among nations be conducted on the principles of fair dealing and equal treatment. Disregard of these principles leads to economic warfare, which undermines the foundation of peaceful and orderly international relations. Search for national economic self-sufficiency, discriminatory trade arrangements, failure to practice the doctrine of equality of commercial treatment are among the most powerful instruments of such warfare. These and other similar policies have the effect of disrupting the channels of trade, of reducing the volume of mutually beneficial interchange among nations of useful goods and services, and of impoverishing all nations. The resulting economic strain and distress creates social unrest within nations and lead to resentment and conflict among nations.

In recent years, there have been truly terrifying developments in contravention of each of these essential conditions for the effective functioning of an orderly world. There has been a staggering multiplication of instances in which solemn contractual obligations have been brushed aside with contemptuous gestures and destructive action. Powerful nations have built up vast armaments for the avowed purpose of attaining their national aims by force; and their action has compelled other nations—even those most sincerely devoted to the cause of peace under a rule of law, including our own—to increase to immense proportions their own armaments.

Peaceful nations have been deprived of their independence by the use of armed force or threat of force, combined with the exercise of fraud and treachery. conquered populations have been subjected to new refinements of oppression and cruelty. Economic warfare on an unprecedented scale and unparalleled in its intensity has come to dominate the foreign trade and other economic policies of many nations, causing immense material losses to all nations and a marked lowering of the standards of living everywhere.

Descent to Anarchy

The specter of a new descent into the conditions of international anarchy which characterized the Dark Ages looms on the horizon today. I am profoundly convinced that it menaces the civilized existence of mankind—of every nation and of every individual. Every nation, and every individual should be actively on guard.

Our own Nation—powerful as it is and determined as it is to remain at peace, to preserve its cherished institutions and to promote the welfare of its citizens—is not secure against that menace. We cannot shut it out by attempting to isolate and insulate ourselves. We cannot be certain of safety and security when a large part of the world outside our borders is dominated by the forces of international lawlessness.

We cannot close our eyes to what is going on elsewhere in the world and delude ourselves with the mere hope that somehow—somehow—all this will pass us by. Never in our national history has there been a more desperate need for a clear understanding by every responsible citizen of our country of what is taking place in the world and of how it affects us. Such understanding is essential to a wise charting and application of our national policies. Under our system of government, it is the most effective safeguard for the maintenance and promotion of the national interest.

Whole World Menaced

The world is today torn by conflicts, the outcome of which will affect the lives of the future generations in all countries. The world is today threatened with an orgy of destruction—not only of life and property, but of religion, of morality, of the very basis of civilized society. The spread of international anarchy not only undermines law, justice and morality among nations, but also inevitably impairs within nations these essential foundations of civilized existence.

In the face of existing conditions, we have no choice but to expand our program of armament construction to a degree necessary to provide fully adequate means of defending this country's security and its rightful interests. But if mankind is to avoid a long-continuing period of chaos and retrogression, it can only be through the firm establishment of order under law. Never before has there been a greater need for our people to place the support of a wholly united public opinion behind our Nation's efforts to exert the great weight of its moral influence in favor of a revindication and revitalization of the basic principles of order under law, which alone can give lasting assurance of safety, security and peace.

Upon those of us who devote their lives to the improvement and application of international law there devolves today a special duty. It is our task to help our fellow citizens to a better realization of the crucial importance which preservation of international law and of order based on law has for them and for their country. It is our task to make the immense significance of international law a living reality in the mind and heart of every American.

See Law Triumphant

While doing this, we should constantly and persistently search for ways and means of strengthening the structure of international law and of making more effective the translation of its principles into firmly established international practice. We should spare no effort to demonstrate that the spirit which has made possible, over the centuries, immense forward strides in the development of international law still lives.

Stunned by the cruel events which unfold all around them, millions of men and women have become a prey to doubt, hopelessness and despair. It is all the more necessary for us, who believe in the eternal vitality of international law and of international morality, to hold fast to the conviction that law and morality will triumph over the forces of lawlessness and chaos which have again risen to challenge the very concept of order under law—just as they have, in the past, triumphed over similar challenges. I am certain of that triumph. I am certain that we and others who hold our beliefs will not falter in that faith or fail to do everything possible to restore and extend the full sway of effective international law over relations among nations.

forces of lawlessness and chaos which have again risen * * *."

His address came at the end of a day of swirling and anxious discussion in official and Congressional circles over the progress of the war in Europe.

Among the day's developments:

This Government in effect rejected Argentina's proposal that the American nations assume a status of non-belligerence in preference to their current neutrality.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau gave the Dutch and Belgian governments blanket license to withdraw official credits here, "frozen" by President Roosevelt to prevent their falling into the hands of Germany. The assets will be available for buying war supplies or other purposes. Four banks and trading companies in the Dutch East Indies were granted similar licenses.

Proposals for lightening restrictions of credits to belligerents in order that the Allies may have greater access to this country's vital materials, reached the floor of the House and set off debate.

Uruguay called for a joint Pan American protest against Germany's invasion of Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg.

Committee approval was given legislation designed, among other things to block "Trojan horse" sabotage of American defenses, especially in Hawaii.

United States diplomats were seeking to remove Americans from the dangerous spots in Holland and Belgium, and the State Department left it to the envoys to decide when they should quit their own posts.

British troops landed in the Dutch West Indies, as was forecast by The Post, but Japanese anxiety over any threat of Allied moves against Holland's East Indies appeared to be abating.

Secretary Hull's address, looked upon in official circles as an important announcement to the Nation, emphasized that "our own Nation—powerful as it is and determined as it is to remain at peace, to preserve its cherished institutions and to promote the welfare of its citizens—is not secure" against the menace of current "international lawlessness."

History's No. 1 Battle Begins Inside Belgium

Nazi Forces Using Blitzkrieg Formula That Defeated Poles

By Harold Denny
Copyright by New York Times

With the British Army in Belgium, May 13.—A battle such as the world has never seen before is beginning just inside Belgium's eastern border, where invading Germans have smashed in the first serious barrier of this country.

The battle is not going too well from the standpoint of the Allies, and the situation today can only be described as grave, though it is not hopeless.

Yesterday's reports that the Germans had penetrated the Belgian line in the Maastricht region are now confirmed. The Belgians have been forced to retire along a 10-mile front to an already prepared second line, which, however, has the advantage of being shorter.

The Germans were able to cross the River Meuse on two bridges that should have been demolished but were not. British bombing planes took terrible chances in diving low to bomb these bridges in an unsuccessful attempt to destroy them before the Germans got over. The Germans poured in by these avenues and then mushroomed out, catching the Belgian elements flankwise and forcing them to withdraw.

Race for Positions

At the present stage of the battle it is a race between the Belgians endeavoring to establish themselves in their new line further west, and the Germans striking with both ground troops and aviation in an effort to widen the breach and smash in with enough forces to exploit this initial gain into a major break through.

The latter are employing heavily motorized units, evidently are trying to repeat the tactics by which they overran Poland, sending motorized ground forces ahead in swiftly moving columns, while bombing planes circle over troops and strong points, acting as artillery. Four hundred bombers were in action against the Belgians.

German aviation is suffering heavy casualties for its audacity, however. British fighter planes, engaging the Germans with equal daring, have had many spectacular successes. It was learned officially today that British aviators have shot down an absolute minimum of 68 German planes in the first three days of this battle.

These 68 were "dead birds," that is they were actually seen to crash. British aviators believe they shot down 25 more, which they saw wobbling away disabled and which they are virtually certain crashed.

Matter of Hours

Whether the Allied forces are now at grips with the Germans cannot be said definitely. There have been strong rumors behind the lines that British elements are already counterattacking the Germans but no information on this subject, either positive or negative, could be obtained from authoritative sources.

But British participation in this battle on a grand scale cannot be more than a few hours away, if it has not already begun. The most intense secrecy is being preserved as to the dispositions of British troops and now they will be used.

Elements of the British army still were moving up today and still cheered by Belgian civilians who line the roads and welcome them as deliverers.

'Big-Top' Glamour Girls

There is an ancient tie between pretty girl performers and clowns, which accounts for their being seen together frequently in circus pictures. Amateur photographers, who have a field day when the "big show" comes to town, will keep the clown-meets-girl tradition alive when the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus pitches canvas at the Twenty-first and C streets northeast grounds Thursday morning for a three-day engagement. Dutch Quit Italy as Fascists Assail Allies

By the Associated Press

Rome, May 13.—Large numbers of Dutch citizens were reported leaving Italy tonight as demonstrations throughout Italy against Britain and France fanned a new Mediterranean crisis.

Some said they were leaving after consulting the Netherlands Legation.

Troops were posted around the British and French embassies in Rome, but a few police were able to divert the columns of disciplined Fascist students marching in the main streets of Rome and crying "Down with England" and for war.

Women Molested

An English woman was reported to have been molested while tearing up an anti-British leaflet, but no British protest was believed intended.

Some Italian sources said additional reservists had been called up to reinforce the 1,250,000 men already under arms, but authorities would not comment on the ground that the query involved military information.

However, authorities confirmed that Premier Mussolini had ordered further strengthening of the "Littorio Line" of fortifications along the French frontier.

Observers generally regarded both the "crisis" and the demonstrations as artificially staged to divert the attention of the Allies while Germany attempts to crash through Belgium and The Netherlands and defeat the Allies in France.

Demonstrators Active

Student demonstrators, some led or addressed by local Fascist leaders, were active in Bologna, Florence, Naples, Mussolini's boyhood home of Forli and other cities.

Some observers thought Germany might feel the need to encircle France and attack simultaneously on two fronts by attempting to pass through Switzerland and the valley of the Po to the Italian-French frontier.

Informed quarters believed Mussolini was trying to avoid an extension of the war, but they said Germany might attempt to undertake the encirclement of France with or without the support of the Italian army.

The Fascist press today said Italian indignation at British and French "piracy" in enforcing their contraband control against Germany was the reason for the student demonstrations.

A side issue of the crisis was friction between Fascists and the Vatican. Mussolini today again gave his approval to the works of a pre-Fascist author which are on the Church's forbidden list.

Detectives stationed at the Vatican City gates were reported to have been reinforced without apparent reason.

Germans Cut Holland in Two like a great hand ready to crush a shell.

Holland's high command acknowledged that the Germans were driving through the border tier of provinces—Groningen, Drente, Overijsel, and Gelderland.

The Grebbe Water Line is the first main water defense for the so-called stronghold of Holland, the most populous area in which are Amsterdam, The Hague and Rotterdam.

The Grebbe Line extends south from the Ijsselmeer to the big rivers which cut east and west through the middle of Holland. Backed up by many fortifications, it forms the Dutch bulwark east of the main inundation defenses through Utrecht Province.

It was South of the river, where the mechanized German units apparently cut the Netherlands off from Belgium.

Intense German air activity was reported in Brabant, where the Dutch were supported by French forces.

The Germans, meanwhile, continued harassing scattered communities with air bombardments, parachute soldiers and the activities of saboteurs.

There were repeated air raid alarms during the day in Amsterdam and the Hague. Two German Heinkels were shot down before dawn during the first alarm of the day here. No bombs were dropped during later alarms up to 1:25 p. m. (8:05 a. m., E.S.T.), although several Nazi planes flew over after daylight and some parchutists were reported to have landed.

Swiss Army Ready to Meet Nazi Thrust

By the Associated Press

Basel, May 13.—The Swiss army stood fully mobilized tonight as reports of German troop concentrations on the frontier strengthened the belief of foreign observers that Germany might strike through Switzerland toward the Rhone Valley of France.

Such a thrust, these observers suggested, might be made to draw Italy into the war on Germany's side.

The German plan of attack—if it comes—presumably would lead through the area between Basel and Lake Constance.

If a smash through Geneva succeeded, foreign observers said, the war might move into the Rhone Valley. Once there, the Germans would have a good military ground on which to persuade Italy to march with Germany against the French, who hold the areas Italy most desires.

Between the Germans and such an objective, however, stands the Swiss army, now estimated at between 550,000 and 600,000 men in first-line forts along the Rhine and in a second, deeper and stronger line from Basel through the junction of the Limmat and Aar rivers to the lakes of Zurich, Wallen and Constance.

500 Refugees Escape Nazis In Tiny Ship

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, May 13.—More than 500 British, Dutch, Belgian, French and Polish refugees from Holland arrived at a British port tonight after a two-day crossing of the north sea in a tiny steamer and with no food except what they had managed to bring on board themselves.

The refugees, men, women and children, and babies carried in baskets, had slept on straw or on hard floors. None had been able to bring more than a few personal possessions.

The arrivals included several consular and diplomatic officials, as well as a dozen members of an English ballet company who had been performing at The Hague.

According to some of these refugees, many of the German parachute troops dropping into Holland were "boys of 16 and 17."

"They did not know what fighting meant," one refugee said, "and they told a Dutch officer on the train that they had been pushed out of the plane. One carried with him the last letter from his mother and her picture. He said he had made up his mind when he set out that he would never live to see her again."

Another refugee said that as he and many others left the Dutch quayside to embark, a shot was fired on them by German "fifth columnists" in the hotel.

Two From Capital Area Caught In the War Zone

Two natives of the Washington area, now serving as United States officials in the Low Countries, were known yesterday to be caught in the war area.

One was Dwight W. Fisher, 56, a vice consul at Antwerp, Belgium, who attended George Washington University when it was still known as Columbian College.

The other was Capt. Monroe Kelly, naval attache and naval attache for air, at The Hague, Netherlands. Appointed to his post in May, 1938, Kelly is listed as a native of Williamsburg, Va.

There were 19 American diplomatic officials attached to Belgium and 21 assigned to the Netherlands.

Referring to these 40, Secretary of State Hull yesterday told his press conference that American diplomatic officials in the Low Countries are on orders to decide for themselves when it is no longer safe to stay at their posts.

Late yesterday the State Department said that the full staffs in the Netherlands and Belgium were still at their posts.

Mary swept Bothwell off his feet

Before he knew her, Bothwell had spoken ill of Mary, the Highland Queen. But when he came face to face with her, and under the spell of her charm, he was swept off his feet. For her part, she felt that she had found the man who would fight the hosts of the world for her.

Mary's friends were loyal. She held them by her charm and thoughtfulness. 'Twas the friend-making quality that led the early makers of Highland Queen whisky to name it for her. It is an appealing Scotch, light and delicate, yet it retains rare flavor and bouquet.

British Told To Expect Withdrawals

that "at the present time we are in a very great battle and I do not know what the position will be when we meet again."

"War With All Our Might"

But, he promised, his policy would be:

"To wage war by land, sea and air. War with all our might and all the strength God can give us."

An air ministry communique tonight said British fighters had shot down more than "40 more" German airplanes and "successfully" bombed German columns in Belgium and Luxembourg. The total enemy air losses claimed by the British air force since Friday morning is 135.

Britain's navy has been operating continuously off the coast of Holland and Belgium in spite of "reported bombing attacks having been made on them," the admiralty said in a communique.

The admiralty also announced British warships had supported Allied operations on land, had bombarded enemy troops landing from the air on airdromes and beaches, and had transported refugees from "Successful bombing attacks" on the Waalhaven Airdrome, near Rotterdam, was another Air Ministry contribution.

Recaptured by Nazis

The Waalhaven Airdrome, occupied by the Germans when they first went into Holland Friday, was lost by the Nazis Saturday and then was recaptured by the invaders yesterday.

The British air force used Beauforts, "the latest and best of British light, long-range bombers," in a spirited 20-minute attack on Waalhaven and their bombs were said to have fired the airdrome buildings and pitted the landing fields.

The Air Ministry also said its planes had carried out a series of attacks on enemy communications in Germany between the Rhine and Dutch frontier and that enemy troops advancing in eastern Belgium had been "heavily bombed."

"Attacks on our airdrome have today (Monday) been less intensive. Little damage to airdromes has been done.

"The advance of enemy troops has been impeded by a series of successful night bombing attacks on both sides of the Dutch frontier."

Amery Is India Secretary

L. S. Amery, a rebel conservative critic of former Prime Minister Chamberlain's conduct of the Norwegian campaign, was named secretary for India, succeeding the Marquess of Zetland. Born in India, Amery once was first lord of the admiralty, colonial secretary and dominion secretary.

Ernest Bevin, secretary of the Transport and General Workers Union, was appointed minister of labor, succeeding Ernest Brown.

Malcolm MacDonald, son of former Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, was named minister of health, succeeding W. E. Elliot.

Lord Woolton was named to succeed himself as food minister.

Chamberlain Cheered

Churchill and Chamberlain were cheered loudly in Commons at the start of the suddenly called session.

Churchill immediately presented a resolution "that this House welcomes the formation of a government representing the united and inflexible resolve of the nation to prosecute the war with Germany to a victorious conclusion."

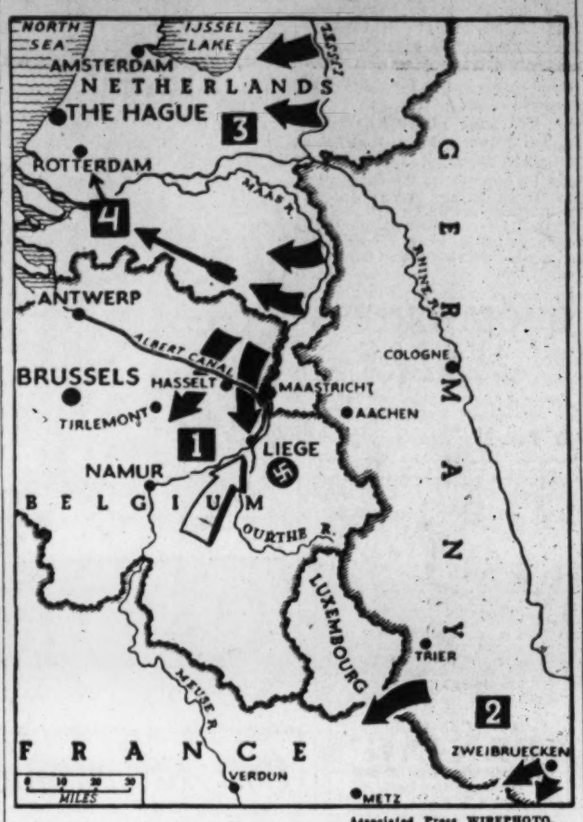
In debate, Britain's World War prime minister, David Lloyd George, seconded Churchill's note of warning of harder times in the offing.

He spoke of "this critical terrible moment" when the nation needed "Mr. Churchill's glittering intellectual gifts, his dauntless courage and his profound study of war."

When the call was made in Commons for a unanimous vote on Churchill's resolution, two Independent Labor members, James Maxton and Campbell Stephen, forced a ballot by shouting "No!"

However, the balloting ended, 381 to 0, because the two opposing members had to act as tellers for the "No" votes and could not vote themselves.

Nazis Penetrate Liege Defenses



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

French were reported winners in the epic clash of more than 1,500 tanks (1) in a struggle which lasted four hours. Possibility of a frontal attack on the Maginot Line was raised when the German high command reported Nazi positions had been moved forward south and southeast of Zweibruecken (2). The French admitted the Germans had driven through Luxembourg and were fighting on French soil (arrow). The Netherlands high command admitted last night that the Germans had cracked through the Grebbe Line (3), the main Dutch water defense system. It was also admitted that Nazi troops had reached Moerdijk Bridge (4), virtually cutting Holland in half, and were driving toward Rotterdam, 15 miles away the first of the Nazi bombers swooped down out of the clouds.

British warships anchored at the port immediately opened counter-fire while British fighting planes took the air. One Dornier bomber was shot down in flames and others damaged before the Nazi squadron was beaten off.

Some of the German planes swept down and machine gunned the decks of the Warship Juliana and her family were boarding. An officer of the ship related:

"It was obvious that the German planes were under orders to succeed at all costs. They apparently thought it worth while to risk numerous bombers in this effort to end the lives of the princess and her babies."

The Netherlands Legation in London declared in an official statement this morning that the Germans—apparently aided by "fifth column" spies shadowing the royal family—were closing in to capture Wilhelmina when the Dutch cabinet persuaded her to flee Holland.

Spies were said to have followed every move of Queen Wilhelmina and her family up until the time they boarded the British ship. The Dutch legation's communique related:

"Queen Wilhelmina had the firm intention never to leave her country.

"The cabinet in The Hague, with the knowledge that the Germans were closing in with a circular movement to effect Her Majesty's capture, advised her to leave at once and go to Zeeland to board a ship.

"In the meantime, news was received that the German military authorities, with every intention of completing their nefarious practices, had started bombing Her Majesty's destination (Zeeland).

Accepts British Offer

"In the knowledge that Her Majesty would serve her country to a better purpose by governing the kingdom, from a place outside the fighting area, Queen Wilhelmina accepted the generous offer of hospitality made by the King and Queen of Great Britain.

"Queen Wilhelmina has the firm intention of returning as soon as possible to her people in their great distress and their heroic fight against overwhelming odds."

The German attempts on the persons of Queen Wilhelmina and her family, as alleged by the Dutch, recalled the recent Norwegian charge that German planes sought out and bombed the town of Elverum when Norway's King Haakon went there from Oslo.

When Wilhelmina stepped from her train at Liverpool Station she was met by King George who shook her hand and kissed her on each cheek, then hurried her away to Buckingham Palace.

Last night she conferred with a group of her ministers including Foreign Minister Van Kleffens and Minister of Colonies Welter.

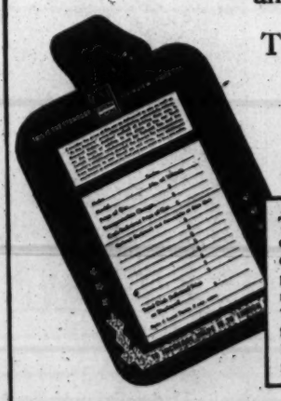
The old army game in this business is for the buyer to play one dealer against another to push up the trade-in allowance. Does it pay? Does the man who makes such a deal get the new car he really wanted in the first place? Does he get the car that represents the best value for his money? Indeed, does he get as much as he thinks for his used car?

The answer is – usually not.

For the dealer who wants to do business that way can easily add something in on the new-car price to make up for a padded trade-in allowance.

That's called "packing" in the trade and everyone agrees it's bad practice in the long run.



This is the standard price tag used by General Motors dealers to show what makes up the prices of new cars delivered to customers. "PRICE OF CAR" means the price we charge for the car itself, including reimbursement for Federal Tax and conditioning — "TRANSPORTATION CHARGE" means a charge for transportation from factory to you, based on rail rates — "OPTIONAL EQUIPMENT AND ACCESSORIES" means the charge for any extra equipment or accessories you elect to buy.

It makes you think you are getting a better deal—but doesn't reduce the money difference you actually pay out.

Our way of opposing the "pack" is through the "plainview" price charts, displayed on our showroom walls, and the price tags on all cars displayed.

These give you all the details on the final delivered price.

You can see the price of the car itself – the charge for transportation from factory to you, based on rail rates – our charge for whatever extra equipment you may elect to buy.

Nothing is hidden or obscure; all charges are plainly in view.

You see what you pay and you see what you get. You buy the car you really want—on value and not on an inflated trade-in allowance.

That lets you buy better. Come in and learn how it all works.

BEFORE YOU BUY, BE SURE THE FINANCE CHARGES SATISFY YOU

A Vital Distinction

Secretary Hull is a diplomat who guards his words with strict adherence to propriety on every occasion. In contrast to some lesser officials in our diplomatic service, he is more likely to err on the side of caution in expressing his views of world events than to make any irresponsible statement. Yet even he has joined in the chorus of condemnation that has been directed toward Germany since the invasion of Belgium and the Netherlands got under way.

In Mr. Hull's address to the American Society of International Law in Washington last night he did not name Germany as an aggressor. But he condemned the "truly terrifying developments" of recent years in terms that left no doubt as to his state of mind.

"There has been a staggering multiplication of instances," he said, "in which solemn contractual obligations have been brushed aside with contemptuous gestures and destructive action . . . Peaceful nations have been deprived of their independence by the use of armed force or threat of force, combined with the exercise of fraud and treachery. Conquered populations have been subjected to new refinements of oppression and cruelty."

While Mr. Hull's plea for a return to international law and respect for national integrity comes like a cry in the wilderness at the moment, it has a significant point. Reestablishment of anything approaching international law would obviously be impossible so long as inoffensive neutral nations are invaded at the convenience of ruthless militarists. Since the United States is intensely interested in the establishment of peace and international stability, it cannot possibly look with indifference upon this lawless and revolutionary force.

Secretary Hull did not go as far as President Roosevelt in expressing hope that the ruthless Nazi invasion of the Netherlands and Belgium would be stopped. But he has underlined the fact that the American policy of noninvolvement in the war does not preclude an active interest on this side of the Atlantic in arresting the tide of aggressive military force.

Craven Performance

Yesterday the House passed the Rankin bill extending pension benefits to dependent widows, children and parents of veterans of the World War, regardless of whether the veterans were suffering at the time of their deaths from service connected disabilities.

Congress has liberalized the pension system year after year until the distinction between service-disabled veterans and all others has virtually ceased to exist. But the bill approved yesterday for the first time definitely abandons the principle of differentiation which has heretofore stood as a protective barrier against a system of general pensions to all veterans and their dependents.

Despite the overwhelming majority vote in favor of the bill, the House was evidently not proud of its action, for it defeated a request for a roll call which would have put its members on record. For the sake of attracting votes in an election year—there is no other plausible excuse for its action—the House has approved a measure that would add an estimated $48,000,000 annually to pension outlays when all beneficiaries have qualified. What the ultimate cost would be it is impossible to guess, as unborn children would be entitled to additional benefits.

The Government has dealt generously with veterans disabled as the result of service and has provided ample facilities for hospitalization and care of all veterans. In addition it has given cash bonuses to hale and hearty, economically independent veterans who never even saw active service overseas.

Compensation and pension payments for the veterans of all wars are now in excess of $400,000,000 yearly, while total annual expenditures of the Veterans' Administration from appropriations and trust funds are in excess of $600,000,000.

In view of the comprehensive systems of social insurance and pensions for needy widows and children established in recent years, there is no justification for a further expansion of benefits to survivors of veterans. Even as it is, it will be many decades before the obligations already assumed will be fully discharged. Unless Congress has lost all concern for the financial solvency of the Government, it will surely pause to consider where its weak yielding to pressure for more and larger pensions is leading us.

Preparing For Defense

The most emphatic and widespread reaction in this country to the war which has been unloosed in Belgium and the Netherlands is the current demand for reexamination of our own system of defense. Layman as well as military experts are now aware of the fact that the business of making war has undergone some revolutionary changes. It would be perilous for any nation which values its independence to ignore this fact.

There is, of course, no reason for hysteria. Hitler's ferocious assault upon the Low Countries could not be duplicated by an enemy seeking to attack the United States. Defense for us is not strictly comparable to the problem confronting the small nations of Europe caught between the crushing forces of the major combatants. Yet it is obvious that new lessons in military science are being learned in the Netherlands and Belgium. And it is equally clear that the United States should take full advantage of these military experiments in strengthening its own defenses.

No doubt the American Army and Navy are aware of most, if not all, of the weapons and strategy employed by the Germans in this new blitzkrieg. But mere knowledge of new fighting methods by our experts does not automatically transform our Army and Navy into effective units for defense and counter-attack. To what extent is our Navy prepared to resist such aerial bombardment as the Nazis are inflicting upon British men o' war? Is our Army sufficiently mechanized to meet the lightning thrusts of the most efficient tank and armored-car units? How nearly adequated is our air force?

Both the executive and legislative branches of the Government ought to be giving very thoughtful attention to these and similar questions. It may be assumed that more money for national defense will be forthcoming. But a boost in the funds available to the Army and Navy will not necessarily give us an adequate defense program. Congress should also make certain that this money will be spent effectively in those fields in which our defense system is now most critically weak.

Some urgent needs, particularly in the Army, ought to be supplied without delay. Long-range defense plans, however, involve questions of policy as well as personnel and military supplies. These issues cannot safely be left to professionals in the armed services. They must be decided by the policy-making divisions of the Government.

Senator Lodge has proposed a comprehensive examination of national defense problems by joint committees to be composed of members of the Appropriations, Naval and Military Committees of the Senate and House. Whether or not this particular resolution is adopted, the idea of a thorough inquiry into defense requirements is sound. Both Congress and the public ought to be informed as to how American arms compare with those now being used with such destructive consequences in Europe.

Such a reexamination of our defense forces would not raise the question of American participation in the European War. But it would have a vital bearing upon our ability to keep war away from our own shores should that necessity arise.

The Churchill Cabinet

The unanimous vote of confidence given the new British government on its first appearance in Parliament was far more than a tribute to Winston Churchill and the men he has gathered around him in his "cabinet of unity." It was primarily and predominantly an expression of national determination to prosecute the war with the greatest possible vigor and achieve that "victory at all costs" which the new premier has declared to be the government's sole aim.

Party differences have completely disappeared in the face of the tremendous crisis which faces Great Britain and her Allies. The new government is a true national coalition. As in World War days, supreme power has been entrusted to and will be exercised by a small inner cabinet of five men consisting of Premier Churchill, former Premier Chamberlain and Lord Halifax on the Conservative side and Clement Attlee, erstwhile leader of the opposition, and his deputy, Arthur Greenwood, from the ranks of the Labor Party.

Outside the war cabinet the coalition is even broader based. Sir Archibald Sinclair, the Liberal leader, has been named minister for air. Sir John Simon, erstwhile chancellor of the exchequer, has been given the post of lord chancellor where his unquestioned legal talents will be put to good use. A particularly happy choice is Herbert Morrison, chairman of the London County Council and one of the ablest administrators in England, as head of the vital supply ministry. The retention of Sir John Anderson as home secretary and minister of home security, the transfer of Anthony Eden to the war office will generally be applauded.

The new cabinet appears, on balance, to be a far more vigorous body than the one it has replaced. It has the additional advantage of an influx of new blood, not only from the Labor and Liberal ranks but also by the expected addition of such able young Conservatives as Robert J. G. Boothby and Richard Law.

Winston Churchill has done well in his first assignment as cabinet maker. He has surrounded himself by perhaps as able a group as could be found in Great Britain. He and his new colleagues have assumed an enormous responsibility. There can be no minimizing the magnitude and difficulties of the task they face.

The La Follette Bill

Majority Leader Barkley has given notice that the La Follette bill to "eliminate certain oppressive labor practices" will be brought before the Senate within a few days. This measure is the outgrowth of an investigation by the Senate Civil Liberties Committee into such matters as industrial espionage, employment of armed strikebreakers, and use of armed guards to interfere with the right of employes to organize and engage in collective bargaining.

There is no question as to the necessity of suppressing certain abuses at which this legislation is aimed. But the sweeping prohibitions which the bill imposes upon employer activities go far beyond any restraints of a legitimately protective nature. Its dangerous implications are especially well illustrated by the provisions banning industrial espionage.

Unquestionably the use of spies to intimidate employes and prevent them from organizing is a despicable practice, already banned as unfair under the National Labor Relations Act. But in their zeal to suppress this evil, the drafters of the La Follette bill would prevent employers from obtaining pertinent and most essential information about their employes.

As defined in the bill, "industrial espionage" means reporting or attempting to report, directly or indirectly, to employers about the plans or activities of their employes with reference to self-organization or the "identity, number or composition of the membership of any labor organization." Transmission of data with respect to the political or economic views or activities of employes or prospective employes is likewise forbidden as a form of industrial espionage.

Under cover of such comprehensive immunity from employer investigation gangsters and racketeers would find it much easier to insinuate themselves into unions, and force employers to deal with such unions as protected secret organizations.

Moreover, if employers were liable to heavy fines and imprisonment for scrutinizing the affiliations of prospective employes, agents of foreign powers would find it much easier to enter our munitions plants. And trouble-makers preaching the doctrine of destruction would have much better opportunities for putting their theories into practice.

It is difficult to believe that the Senate will weaken any safeguards against sabotage in carrying out our national defense program at this critical period. Nor does it appear at all likely, if this bill should pass, that the courts would uphold a type of legislation denying the right of employers to obtain information vital to the safe and efficient conduct of their business.

Political Ballet-Hoo

A special dispatch from the Republican National Committee proudly announces that the proceedings of this summer's convention will be televised and that 3,000 in and around Philadelphia as well as 40,000 other potential Republicans in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts will now be able to look on. Maine and Vermont, too far to be reached by television's wiles, are obviously considered safe anyway.

This innovation will no doubt considerably change the tenor of political rallies. When radio first became important, candidates who did not already possess a melodious and soothing voice were required to cultivate one. And, ever since, lack of ability to come across the ether effectively has been counted among the most difficult handicaps a candidate can have.

But a persuasive voice will no longer be sufficient. Candidates for office will now, in addition, have to possess a glamorous appearance and at least average acting ability, for no old-fashioned waving of arms and tearing of hair will go down with sophisticated audiences conditioned by the movies.

Television would appear to weight the scales in favor of such candidates as Dewey, McNutt and the ever-charming Mr. Roosevelt. However, the time may be at hand when all pretense will be discarded and Robert Taylor or Tyrone Power will, like Wintergreen in "Of Thee I Sing," sweep the country on a straight platform of love.

Squirrel Defended

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see by the papers that one of the numerous squirrels in the Zoological Park that run at large to the amusement and entertainment of the general public went on the rampage and bit three persons yesterday. I also see that the animal was killed and was to be sent for examination for rabies.

The squirrel in question had lost some two or three inches of skin and fur from the tip of his tail. It is evident that in some way he was injured and, when he made his attacks, must have been in quite considerable pain. Since he attacked persons, it is reasonable to suppose that he connected his pain with a person. In other words, it seems that someone must have maltreated him. Since there are often children visiting the park, this may become a serious matter.

Another moral to be drawn is that, in such cases, the person injured should at once apply to the park police for first aid. From personal experience I know he will not ask in vain, but will receive prompt, sympathetic and courteous treatment—as I did at the hands of the sergeant there.

"Waking To Realities"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Waking to Realities," editorial in The Post of May 9, is aptly stated:

". . . The moment for constructive intervention may be long delayed, and when it comes may well be difficult to seize. But the responsibility of America in the issue is not the less real for that. It is real, if for no other reason, because failure on our part to work for a really reliable peace can only lead to ever greater risk of our entanglement in a spreading war.

In these trying times can one sit idly by and wait for issues to develop? As a true American I pray for peace with all my heart and soul. May the powers that be work quickly and earnestly toward that end and save these noble youth in Europe.

Walter-Logan Bill Controversy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Ernest K. Lindley's "Ironic Sequel" on the Logan-Walter bill, in The Post of April 29, is a suitable companion piece to the first ball tossed out at the April opening game of the American League season here in Washington. He merely "beans" one of the numerous photographers trying to take a flattering, soft-focus picture of the boss.

I was away from Washington when Mr. Lindley's column of April 24, "A Reply to Critics," was published; and only today, on my return, have I read it in the Appendix to the Congressional Record. I have the honor to be president of one of the national organizations at which you sneer in that column, organizations listed by Col. McGuire as supporters of the Logan-Walter bill. Formerly we were known as the Mail Users' Association—quite recently we shortened our name to "National Council on Business Mail."

We include 49 different lines of industry, 14 national trade associations, and approximately one-third of the total postal revenues of the United States. Naturally, we have had extensive, and comprehensive experience with the majority of the agencies, commissions, bureaus, and departments of the Government included in the scope of the Walter-Logan bill. Practically all our members are operating "union shop." So perhaps we have a logical and legitimate interest in the Walter-Logan bill, even a constructive interest from an American point of view! Organized labor has gone on record to the foregoing effect, so perhaps you will concede the point.

We have been in support of the Walter-Logan bill since the first day it was introduced, in the Seventy-fourth Congress. We appeared in support of the bill in the Seventy-sixth Congress, before the House Judiciary Committee. With the slightest research, you can find our testimony in print as a Congressional document. We approved the bill as drafted.

Perhaps, even in the face of this, we are, in Mr. Lindley's opinion, still one of the "commentators who are over (our) heads." However, what puzzles us is, how does he determine when all other commentators on this bill except him are over their heads? Especially when he admits in print that he is "not equipped to write on this subject without consulting experts?" Who are these "experts?" How would he recognize them as such? How could we, therefore, place any faith in his guarantee that they are "experts," even assuming he would identify them in print, which he has not done to date?

Perhaps Mr. Lindley would be interested to know what the late Senator Logan said to me, when I telephoned to him on the day, two years ago this spring, following my testimony before the House Judiciary Committee, in support of his and Francis Walter's bill. He asked:

"What sort of testimony did the boys from the bureaus present?"

I replied: "They said that the Walter-Logan bill would put a severe crimp in their style."

He exploded over the telephone: "By God, that's just what is needed, and what the bill is intended to do."

Mr. Farley heads the Postoffice Department, and for six out of his seven years has operated it at a profit, balancing his budget, and taxing the mail users less and less each year. His department is charged by Congressional statutes with more administrative and quasi-judicial procedure and powers than almost any other branch of the Federal Government.

It is interesting, although Mr. Lindley failed anywhere to discuss a fact so obviously embarrassing and destructive to his argument, that the Postoffice Department has offered no demur to inclusion in the scope of the Walter-Logan bill. Its legal experts, with more than 2,300 laws and regulations to administer, with 150 years of precedents and decisions and rulings of the Federal courts confronting them, and with a lifetime of experience behind them in conducting a postal court of recognized authority and jurisdiction, view the Walter-Logan bill calmly, and as a needed step in the right direction.

It would perhaps be cruel to dissect publicly in this letter some of the unnamed "experts" whom Mr. Lindley has consulted. Many of them are listed in print as witnesses at the House Judiciary Committee hearings on the Walter-Logan bill, in violent opposition to that bill. Their testimony, there, is their measure. All of them suffered then, and suffer now, from the delusion that wisdom will die with them. Perhaps it will. Nevertheless, we, the proponents of the Walter-Logan bill, face that overwhelming catastrophe unafraid, even stoically. One great advantage of democracy is that eventually the bureaucrats and the "experts" can be tossed out into the street.

THOMAS QUINN BEESLEY,
President National Council on Business Mail.
Washington, May 1.

Thumbnail Compendium

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The 1940 Presidential race is on. Candidates are on the increase. Speeches become longer and more devious. Daily it becomes more difficult to remember all the candidates and what they stand for. The busy man may appreciate the following thumbnail compendium:

Willkie: A candidate who believes we should elect a businessman and divest the Government of all business.

Dewey: A candidate who believes a President should jail all the politicians who elect him.

Farley: A candidate who believes a politician can be President if a President can be a politician.

Vandenberg: A candidate who believes it better to be popular in Washington than in the rest of the country.

Taft: A candidate who believes the President's sole duty is to fudget with the budget.

McNutt: A candidate who thinks the country needs what it never had before—a handsome President.

Garner: A candidate who believes the easiest way to become Vice President is to take a stab at the Presidency.

Hull: A candidate who likes to be in deep water on an even keel.

Wheeler: A candidate who is just as willing to act as President from the Senate as from the White House.

Jackson: A candidate who knows what the businessmen and the politicians are up to.

LaGuardia: A candidate who knows what goes on in the soup.

Stassen: A candidate who thinks the Republicans can win if they hire a boy.

Thomas: A candidate who runs for Auld Lang Syne.

Lewis: A candidate who believes in giving the labor unions their money's worth.

Roosevelt: A candidate who would like to find some one to serve his third term.

Mabel

Up in Mabel's room we have Mabel. Had Mabel. Mabel's a waitress now.

It all started with my running an ad in the paper for a general housekeeper and baby nurse. And of all the thousands I interviewed I picked Mabel—a mountain girl from Cutshin, Ky., who could fry an egg like it was a chip from the Rock of Gibraltar and beat a biscuit to the fluff of a cloud.

Mabel was boy crazy.

At one time we considered having the phone taken from our bedroom and put in Mabel's room. Calls came day and night and in all kinds of accents.

Invariably came two words with a question mark?—"Mabel there?"

However, there were those who thought I was Mabel answering and they would play a game with me. I'd say, "Whom did you wish to speak to?" and they say, "Who do you think?"

Pretty soon there would pop up Mabel, hovering, dusting and hovering, and I'd know.

"Just a minute, please; telephone, Mabel."

Then one night we had the candy-box episode

This was an eerie thing and just goes to show what a Cutshin girl is up against.

My husband had gone to cover an ice hockey match and Mabel to write a letter—Mabel was a great correspondent—when the doorbell rang. I opened the door and in shot a white box with a red string. A peculiar looking little person was standing there in front of me and peering from behind was Mabel, who, incidentally was a little peculiar looking herself.

"'Sfor Mabel," he muttered.

I shut the door, handing her the box. It was candy with a note attached, and somehow Mabel got me to reading her message. Honest, I didn't want to. An answer was expected. So—I had to take over. Mabel was shaking and saying, "Don't let him get in here—maybe you'd better let him in—tell him I don't want any candy."

It was terribly dark outside and my voice wasn't quite the clear ringing bell I meant it to be.

"Come to the door, please, whoever you are, Mabel will speak to you."

Now we were both shaking.

Out of the bushes or an automobile, or whatever black thing it was, came a very large sailor. He had his hat on the most possible front part of his head and his hands in pockets up on his chest. I recognized his voice from having had to play the telephone game with him. While he and Mabel volleyed back and forth with the candy box I proceeded to tell him how tired I was of his bothering us.

The telephone rang.

It was my husband and I was so wrapped up in the candy box-sailor situation I said, "Hold the line," and started fussing at the visitor again. Then back to the phone with my husband shouting. "What the hell's going on? What's the matter?"

I explained as best I could and hung up.

Mable had the candy and was offering me a piece—though absentmindedly. She had a dreamy look, the sailor was gone, and she said, "Arthur, I wonder what his last name is?"

After that came the stag dinner affair.

There were to be six men, friends of my husband, and Mabel couldn't wait. Six men in one room, wow!

She floated in with the ham, trucked in with the sweet potatoes and more or less fell in with the spinach.

There was a horrible minute or two when I saw the gentleman at my right eating his vegetables from the dog dish.

This was no ordinary dish just used by the dog, but a real graphic dog dish with a fluffy kind of Airdale painted on it, and the word D O G in brownish-green letters.

Somehow I couldn't bear to watch any longer. In my sweetest laughing voice I tried to make as light of the whole thing as I could, but it didn't help any when my husband asked the embarrassed gentleman if he could bark, or how loud.

I called out, "Oh, Mabel, you've made a mistake," handing her the dog dish with the Airdale, by now three-quarters exposed, and said, "bring us another dish."

Mabel had the old dreamy look again. She floated out with the plate and was back again quick as a wink. She had a dish all right, all right. This one had a collie on it. We had two dogs!

Mabel's gone now. Gone to be a waitress, and it's with a sad voice that I play the old telephone game when an inquiring "cousin" or "uncle" calls up for Mabel.

They're all kin to Mabel.

If Hitler Triumphs

U. S. Faces Decision

KNOW THIS, America. Know this, for it will confront you until you come to decision.

If Nazi conquers Britain and France, then the Nazi system of government conquers the British and French system. The Nazi system is substantially identical with the Communist system. It is authoritarian government.

The authoritarian form, already entrenched in Russia and Germany, would, after conquering Britain and France, extend over all Europe, all Asia, all Africa. On the whole Eastern Hemisphere it would be universal and omnipotent.

Could we, and the rest of the Western Hemisphere, remain immune?

The answer is almost certainly no. The world cannot permanently be divided into an authoritarian Eastern Hemisphere and a democratic Western Hemisphere. If it were for a time thus divided, the authoritarian hemisphere would probably conquer the democratic hemisphere. For the authoritarian leaders and nations, Nazi in Europe, and Japan in Asia, practice military aggression as a fundamental part of their program. Continuous use of force, force as the permanent basis of government, is a primary tenet of their system.

An authoritarian Eastern Hemisphere could probably conquer the Western. It could probably conquer by military war. It could certainly conquer by economic war, followed by military.

THE WESTERN continent, North and South America, are not an economic unit—they do not have economic solidarity. They are only a geographical unit—and that misleads us. They cannot become an economic unit. The United States will not buy Brazil's cotton nor Argentine's wheat and beef. An authoritarian Europe and Japan will buy them—and by means of economic penetration will set up the authoritarian system. Getting a foothold in South America, authoritarian government may readily cover all that continent and Central America. It has already shown itself in Mexico, where an advance "fifth column" is at work.

The hope of a unified, self-contained, democratic, Western Hemisphere is hardly tenable. In truth, it is a dangerous dream.

If Germany conquers Britain and France, making the authoritarian system supreme in the Eastern Hemisphere, we cannot thereafter defend the Western Hemisphere. We, the United States, will ultimately succumb to the authoritarian system.

America must make decision. The decision is between these alternatives:

Either, to take a chance on the hope that Britain and France will successfully resist conquest.

Or, to give help to Britain and France, and thus make sure, if we can, that we shall never be called upon to defend, alone, the Western Hemisphere. We are already giving them some help. The question is, if we choose this alternative, how much more help and in what forms—how best to cooperate, and to what degree.

Those are the alternatives before us. That is the picture of the decision we must make, a picture which confines itself to American self-interest alone, regardless of sympathy or sentiment.

IT IS A MOMENTOUS decision America must make. The need for making it comes at an unfortunate time. For the decision, whichever it be, calls for national unity in whichever course the decision points to. And the fact is, many of our present conditions make not for unity but for disunity, and not for clear thinking but for confusion. We are within six weeks of the national convention of one of our great parties, to be followed by the other, and by the campaign and election.

That fact alone makes for contention, for cleavage of thought, clash of emotion. This would exist on the eve of any Presidential campaign. This one has a feature which especially makes for contention. In this one, the President in office has let it appear he might accept a third term, which would violate one of our most deep-rooted traditions. That, if the President goes on with it, would so offend an immense section of our people as to make unity impossible.

Besides, the very advocacy of a third term is frankly based by many, including close associates of the President, on a class conflict, an appeal to one section of the people against another.

There is further disunion, between the branches of government. A Congress dominated by the President's own party but disquieted by the President's course about domestic matters, repeatedly and overwhelmingly flouts his wishes, rejects the measures he favors.

We are beset by disunion, and by other confusions. But what this column started out to say, and ends by saying, is that America is confronted by the alternatives here described. America must decide between them. The decision cannot be evaded.

An Inspiration

GREAT EXCITEMENT prevails in the stage hands' and movie employes union or mob as the day approaches for the opening of the union's international convention in Louisville. Although that date, June 3, is still some time away, the stink-bomb teams representing Chicago, New York, St. Louis and Southern California are in a high state of competitive zeal as they face the blue-ribbon or championship test for the John P. Nick Trophy, one of the largest baubles in the realm of labor racketeering. The John P. Nick Trophy is an artistic work of extraordinary merit and graphic symbolism. It depicts an American mother and two little children lying in the aisle of a moving picture theater overcome by the fumes of a stink bomb in the ventilating system and trampled in the ensuing panic, the group upheld by a huge, golden gorilla. It was named for John P. Nick, of St. Louis, who was kicked out of the leadership of Projectors' Local 143 of that city by a court order and indicted on two charges of extortion, but acquitted on one charge after three mistrials, though a famous directed verdict which culminated in the Post-Dispatch contempt case.

Mr. Nick received his original appointment from George Browne, the international president, who also personally selected Willie Bioff, the old pander as one of his personal representatives, and Nick Circella, a Chicago stick-up man and Capone gangster, as another.

Although officially removed from Local No. 143, by a court order which has been affirmed by the Missouri Supreme Court, Mr. Nick remains a vice president of the international union, with the official support of Will Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, who instructed the St. Louis Central Trades Union not to seat the anti-Nick delegates.

Thus, it will be seen, Mr. Nick is an illustrious figure and an inspiration to the minor leaders who will attend the reunion of the mob.

The art of stink bombing has been developed to a high degree in recent years, but no mob has more reason to be proud of its progress in the specialty than the gorillas of stage hands' and movie employes' mob. As the technicians of Hollywood have improved the sound effect of the movie industry, the gorillas have matched them, stride for stride, or smell for smell, with new chemicals, the most notable being a formula known as buzzard's breath, invented in Chicago, which is expected to make a strong bid for the championship in the Louisville tournament. The New York stink bomb team has been working a recipe based on an old stench formerly used in the dry-cleaning racket, but greatly improved, and known as the Knickerbocker reek and the Southern California team promises some powerful competition with a liquid called cheval mort. The team may exaggerate slightly, but all the entrants in the stink-bomb competition claim that after one treatment it is necessary not merely to renovate a theater but to tear it down. The St. Louis team, of course, has a peculiar incentive of prestige and loyalty to this great event of the convention, and confidential advices have it that their stench will be compounded from elements distilled from the verdict, whereby the first of the extortion charges against Mr. Nick was dismissed from the bench. It is admitted that the boys of the St. Louis team certainly have something there. Still, all entrants profess to be confident of winning the Nick Trophy, and one member of the New York team expressed the optimism of his group in the words, "We will stink them bums out of town."

SOME DIFFICULTY was overcome in the councils when it was suggested that it might be impossible to obtain permission to stink bomb any of the Louisville theaters, but this was quickly overcome when the captain of the Chicago team said, "Since when do we have to get permission to stink out a joint?" The practical wisdom of this remark was obvious, so visitors to Louisville theaters during the mob's reunion may expect to serve as guinea pigs for the competition at any time, and after the reunion it may be necessary to tear down not only the theaters but the whole city of Louisville.

The competition for the Tommy Maloy Memorial Blast Furnace also will be hotly contested. Mr. Maloy, late president of the Chicago branch of the mob, was demised abruptly by a shotgun or blast furnace in 1935, and his memory is revered because he was one of the most successful gorillas in the union's history and remains a model.

Today And Tomorrow

The Necessary Plan Of American Defense

IF WE KEEP cool, and do not let ourselves become rattled, we shall not appropriate another half billion dollars for national defense until we have reexamined and reconsidered the fundamental plan of our national defense. The American people have been misled once by the politicians into thinking that whatever happens, America is secure. They must not be misled again by politicians into thinking that something has been done if Congress excitedly votes another appropriation. The situation is too serious for such trifling. Before anything practical can be done, the American people must open their eyes to the fact that the whole plan, that the fundamental plan of American defense upon which we have relied, may collapse altogether within the next few weeks.

For the Congressional appropriations, large as they look, are based on a theory which may have been smashed to pieces before Congress adjourns, before either party can hold its convention. There is nothing to be done and there is nothing this country can begin to do until the people, the Congress, and our national leaders have honestly faced that possibility.

OUR SYSTEM of national defense is based on the assumption that our vital interests and our security will never be threatened in more than one of the two oceans at the same time, and never by a naval power that is as strong as ourselves. Our program for defense rests upon the hope and the belief that if we are threatened in the Pacific, we have a navy stronger than Japan's; that if we are threatened in the Atlantic, we have a navy stronger than the combined navies of the totalitarian states. Thus we are assuming that if we had to fight in the Pacific, we could count in the Atlantic upon the benevolent neutrality of all European powers. We are assuming that if we were threatened in the Atlantic, we could count upon the neutrality of Japan.

These assumptions, upon which are founded the whole American system of security, are true as long as Great Britain and France retain control of the Atlantic Ocean. Then we cannot be attacked in the Atlantic, and our navy is sufficient to guard our interests in the Pacific. But if the Allies fall, the whole conception of American defense falls with them, and the whole theory on which we are operating is false. We have a one-ocean navy. A one-ocean Navy can protect only one ocean. As long as the other ocean is in strong and friendly hands, we are secure; if the other ocean is not in friendly hands, we are insecure in both oceans. The propaganda which seeks to hide that basic truth from the people may disguise itself as anti-British but in its practical consequences it is anti-American. A nation with two ocean frontiers and one navy with which to guard them is being imperiled by a most dangerous propaganda when it is told that it can dare to be indifferent if in both its oceans it is left without strong friends and is surrounded by a coalition of formidable, unfriendly, and envious aggressor states.

IF THE United States can be challenged only by one inferior naval power in one ocean at a time, then the United States will not be challenged at all. If the United States is challenged, it will be challenged in both oceans at once and from within this hemisphere as well. Unless we are prepared for that, we are not prepared at all to defend our security and our vital interests, and any program of national defense which Congress may now consider will be a snare and a delusion unless it is based upon a clear and resolute recognition of this truth.

The critical fact about our position is that such a coalition in the two oceans is now a practical possibility, perhaps even an imminent probability. If the Nazi offensive succeeds, and no man can be sure it will not, a coalition of European and Asiatic aggressor powers will without fail come into being. A Nazi victory in western Europe is bound to create such a coalition, to invite and provoke and compel the formation of a working alliance composed of Germany, Italy, Russia, and Japan. If this coalition overthrows the Franco-British power in the world, the victors will be the masters of the British, the French, the Dutch, the Belgian, the Danish, and the Portuguese empires. That is to say, there will be no power left on the face of the globe, except ourselves, which is capable even of objecting as they proceed to establish themselves in the islands of the Pacific, in the islands of the Atlantic, and on the western shores of Europe and Africa from Iceland and Portugal to Cape of Good Hope.

THERE ARE SOME who think that the coalition might proceed to attack us. For my own part, I do not think so. I do not think so because I think it will be unnecessary for them to go to that much trouble. There are others who think the victorious coalition will be so "exhausted" by the war that the lions which are now tearing Europe and the Orient to pieces will lie down wearily and become lambs. That also I do not believe. For victory, I submit, so tremendous a victory will not satiate their appetite, but whet it; they will not be exhausted because the booty to be had by looting the richest lands on earth will more than make up for their material losses in conquering them.

Therefore, I do not believe the victorious aggressors would attack us directly, nor do I think they would leave us alone. I think they would do the obvious and easy things, which for so many years they have done so efficiently and so profitably to the Chinese on one side of us and to the British Empire on the other side of us. I think they would squeeze us and blackmail us.

THAT THEY COULD do with no great risk to themselves—given the fact that we have a one-ocean navy, no effective army, no great air power, no sizable armament industry, no allies, and a collection of possessions, obligations, commitments and vital interests scattered over the surface of the globe from Alaska to the rubber plantations and tin mines of southwestern Asia, from Greenland to Patagonia. Of late there have been many merry quips because the British have been offering guaranties to small nations in Europe; before we laugh ourselves to death about the British, we shall do well to remember that we have guaranties outstanding to 21 small nations, to the Dominion of Canada, to the vast island archipelago of the Philippines on the other side of the Pacific, not to mention qualified commitments in China and in the Netherlands Indies.

This vast, far-flung complex of American interests is spread out in the midst of two oceans: in Alaska it is within a few miles of Russia, in the Far East it is within a few miles of Japanese Formosa, in South America it is closer to Europe and Africa than it is to continental United States or to any outpost which we firmly control. Why should the victorious coalition make war on us when we are as vulnerable as that, when in all directions we have undefended hostages on which they can lay their hands? Remove the power of Britain and France to hold them in bounds—the obvious way to deal with the interests of the United States is by intimidation and blackmail.

WHY SHOULD THEY fight us when they can ask us to give up whatever it is that they covet? If we object to some demand, let us say, in the Pacific and make ready to resist, they need only manufacture storm-clouds in the Atlantic, or engineer uprisings and convulsions in Latin America. With one navy and no army and a meager air force we shall not know whom to resist, when to resist, or where to resist.

If anyone wishes to realize the practical problem which may confront this country in the next few weeks, let him ask himself where, in which ocean, he will wish to place our navy if Hitler crushes the allies. Someone ought to ask Mr. Dewey that question. Would he keep the navy at Hawaii; if so, how would he guard the Atlantic? Would he bring the navy into the Atlantic; if so, how would he guard the Pacific? The problem is insoluble: two oceans cannot be protected with one navy. If the allies fall, we shall be surrounded by victorious powers. Their threats will be more numerous than our capacity to deal with them. We shall not be invaded. We shall be driven from Munich to Munich, gradually stripped of our possessions and our outlying vital interests and of the strategical means to defend ourselves.

THIS CRITICAL position cannot be repaired by the simple device of appropriating more money for warships, planes and military equipment. It would require years, several years at the minimum, to create the facilities, the shipyards and the factories, and to train the skilled workers and the officers and men. It is an impossibility for us to create a two-ocean navy except by a gigantic national effort extending over many years and by an expenditure which may conservatively be estimated at $7,000,000,000. If the Allies fall this summer, and Europe and Asia and Africa are conquered by a victorious coalition of the aggressor states, the redistribution of the resources and of the strategic points of the world's surface will be carried out with no more respect for our wishes and our interests than we are able to command with such power as we now possess.

We must have no illusions that, thereafter, we shall be allowed to proceed without interference to construct a two-ocean navy and a mighty air force and an adequate army. Once they are in possession of the resources of the Allied empires and of the strategic bases which dominate the two oceans, the totalitarian victors in this war will not sit around and wait until we have made ourselves formidable. They will act to prevent us from making ourselves formidable. They are not fools and they do not hesitate to act before their opponents are ready. They know how to act in order to prevent their opponents from making themselves ready. With possessions extending from Alaska to the Philippines, with 21 small nations under our protection, they can harry us, threaten us, disturb us, press at so many widely separated points at once that, even more than the British, we shall not know where to place our inadequate means of defense.

BECAUSE IT WILL necessarily take a long time to make adequate our means of defense, a successful resistance by the Allies is a vital interest of the United States. Only by their successful resistance can we gain the precious time we must absolutely have in order to prepare ourselves adequately. For that reason the only practical plan of American defense is to proceed at once to a vast expansion of plants and personnel for the making of warships, airplanes and military equipment; to sell to the Allies as fast as we can the armaments that can be turned out at once, while we build up for ourselves, in the event of their defeat, the capacity to produce adequate armaments.

By making promptly available to the Allies the immediate products of our plants we shall be employing the only practicable means of gaining time in which to expand our productive capacity. Time is what matters to us. We cannot intervene by force of arms in the war that is now being fought; if we wished to intervene, we could not. We have nothing to intervene with, and if we had, the weapons could be more effectively employed by the trained troops of the Allies than by any army that we could raise and train quickly enough to make any difference.

Therefore, our policy should be to organize at once a vast expansion of all our facilities for building ships, airplanes, and instruments of war. What those facilities can produce immediately we should sell immediately to the Allies. With those weapons they may be able to withstand the attack. In so far as they do, their successful defense will provide us with the infinitely precious time we shall need to develop the industrial capacity needed for our own defense; and if the Allies fall, we shall at least have made a start toward preparing ourselves for the emergency which will then confront us.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Belgium—1940

From Belgium comes the news again—
"The Germans came at dawn!"
Again the lawless legions struck,
Again the rape was on;
And from cross-dotted fields of dead
Beneath the tender grass,
A ghostly army seems to cry
Again, "They shall not pass!"

II.

Once more the weak, the little state,
Is taken by the throat;
We hear the beat of iron boots
And mark a war lord gloat;
But those in graves upon the hill
Who saw this all before
Join in a cry that sweeps the world,
"We'll hold the line once more!"

III.

Again the treaty and the pact
Are scraps of paper, quite!
As haughty legions raise anew
The banner "Might Makes Right;"
But there beside a wooden cross,
I see a specter grin
And hear it whisper knowingly,
"The right shall always win!"

IV.

The flame and smoke are seen afresh—
The dead lie in the streets;
I see the rivulets of blood
As history repeats;
"To victory!" the giant screams . . .
But . . . somewhere . . . far away
I hear as from a spirit voice
"This, too, shall pass away."

V.

The aged and the children flee;
This touching scene of war—
The flight of helpless refugee
Is witnessed as before;
"Behold our hour!" says the foe.
"The triumph of the great!" . . .
A million ghosts in poppied fields
Are heard to whisper: "Wait!"

VI.

Bombs scorch the blossom on the bough
As spring is done to death
By those who see beauty in
The cannon's fetid breath;
"No force can stop us!" is the cry
Of those who live by war . . .
A voice sweeps from an hundred fields,
"You thought this once before!"

VII.

The peaceful valleys blackened are—
The lovely cottage burns—
Invaders use the torch and sword
As blackest night returns;
The goosestep has its fitful day . . .
A voice comes from the sod;
"The force you Germans never sense
Shall stop you, praised be God!"

Cracking Down On The C. T. M.

Mexico City.

A PUBLIC revolt, led by the army, against the militaristic ambitions of the Confederation of Mexican Labor (C. T. M.) has tossed the whole oil controversy into the shade for the moment and evoked such a sigh of relief as has not been heard in Mexico City for many months. The importance of the move is sharply put in the statement by the National Union of Veterans of the Revolution that "This is the first step which the Cardenas government has taken to avoid future bloodshed."

Genuine alarm was expressed here when on May Day 30,000 militarized workers paraded through the city. The workers, all members of the C. T. M., had been trained by regular army officers, under the so-called sports-military program of the confederation. This alarm mounted to consternation when, five days later, the Workers' University, maintained by the C. T. M., blandly announced that it would start a military college for the training of officers.

Since late in September the C. T. M. has been so closely identified with the Communist Party that all moderate elements have been alienated from it. Moreover, it has played a role so belligerently political, both in national and international affairs, that no doubt is left as to its intentions and affiliations. Its newspaper, El Popular, is the mouthpiece for the most antidemocratic propoganda published in Mexico, closely paralleling the propaganda of the Nazi agents here. Accordingly a parade of militarized C. T. M. workers, which a year ago aroused only complacent pride from the Mexican papulace, today is viewed as a threat to the public peace and national government.

THREE DAYS only elapsed before the announcement of the military college was answered by the ministry of national defense in a statement so uncompromising as to throw down the gauntlet to the workers. "This ministry," said the statement, "considers it opportune to declare that the existence of a militia independent of the only armed force legally authorized in the republic cannot be tolerated."

Vicente Lombardo Toledano, general secretary of the C. T. M., replied that "The courses are being organized" to instruct workers as aides to the army officers, should such aid be needed in a moment of national crisis. He defended the benefit to the workers' health from the military training and said there was no intention to replace the regular army in its duties. This weak defense, which completely ignores the political implications of his militia and proposed military college, has been ignored in all reactions to the event.

The decisive stand of the ministry of national defense has been greeted with unanimous approval from the independent and conservative press, from political organizations and, most significantly of all, from other labor groups. The central committee of the Regional Confederation of Mexican Labor, nearest rival to the C. T. M., pointed out that its leader, Luis Morones, had condemned the workers' militia immediately after the parade.

The executive committee of the General Confederation of Labor commented that "sport is one thing, and the organization of an army another. Vicente Lombardo Toledano is using the sports pretext to build a personal army which would cause here a tragedy such as that of Spain—that is, to place worker against worker, with the familiar pitiful results. We demand that the C. T. M. militia be disbanded before it becomes a menace to the public peace and to the constitutional government."

THE NATIONAL Workers' Anti-Communist Bloc, a conservative organization, congratulated Gen. Jesus Agustin Castro, minister of national defence, upon his statement, and also demanded "the immediate dissolution of the workers' battalions and the absolute prohibition of similar forces, disguised under the name of sport."

Excelsior, an independent daily, commented that "the national army recovered with one blow its domination and reappeared before the public for what it is—an institution legally authorized for the protection of the public peace which has its responsibilities defined, and which cannot admit the disfiguration of its principle (by others)."

El Universal pointed out that the workers' militia does not even represent the laboring class as a whole, but only one group. "We are of democratic convictions and prejudices," it said, "and looking back at the lessons of recent history, we see in this affair the chance of a repetition of the Spanish tragedy which destroyed, poisoned, corrupted and ruined Spain, and whose catastrophic epilogue is before our eyes. Against this threat the government, the army and the Mexican people are conscientiously and patriotically on the alert."

The conservative La Prensa uttered a more ominous note. "If Lombardo Toledano persists in his tortuous plan of giving military training at the Workers' University, even though it is taught by regular army officers, he will be in flagrant violation of the laws and end up in placing the Worker's University beyond the bounds of the constitution. This would amount to defiance of the Federal government and have the grave aspect of subversion."

Regular army officers commented that although the whole army had been opposed to the training of the workers that such training could continue so long as it remained in the control of the ministry of national defense. One gagged that if the workers wanted to improve their sports it would be better to spend their time on swimming. Another scoffed: "It's not what they will do with a gun in their hands. It's what they would do facing a gun that really counts!"

THE POLITICAL significance behind this storm is that Mexico needs no Martin Dies to expose its weak spots for it is ready to do its own housecleaning. The government's cracking down on the C. T. M.'s military ambitions is seen as only a preliminary step to rid itself of alien influences and avoid the mistakes which have been made elsewhere when too great leniency toward either Communist or Nazi maneuvers was shown. The picture of Spain's civil war is always before the public consciousness here and the administration is determined not to permit similar events to occur here by machinations of either the right or left.

There are innumerable straws in the wind here to show a strong conservative swing. They were blown aside temporarily when labor was summoned forth to support the administration during the celebration of the oil expropriation and the nationalistic wave springing from the United States note. But they are too fundamental to be crushed completely by any individual or group for they accurately depict the public temper which is clamoring for conservatism.

A preliminary blast against Lombardo Toledano and the C. T. M., as leaders of the Leftist front, was made by former President Emilio Portes Gil several months ago. As one of the brain trust of the Avila Camacho campaign Portes Gil was a powerful spokesman. Now the national army speaks up to put labor in its place, a move which can safely be assumed to have administration backing. The question now is how the C. T. M. will respond to this challenge. If it persists in establishing the Military College for its own ranks a showdown may be expected. If it does not the C. T. M. and Lombardo Toledano will both lose face.

Man's Mother Lives With Newlyweds; Trails Them Wherever They Go, in the House or Out; Now Hints At Sharing Their Vacation; Bride Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Less than a year ago I was married to a good man who has a widowed mother. We bought a new home and furnished it throughout before we were married. I had expected that the two of us would have a few weeks together before his mother moved in with us. In fact, that was the agreement made between us.

It was expected the mother would visit her people in the North, as had been her custom for the past 15 years. But she decided she wouldn't go North and moved in when we did. She has a daughter in the city with whom she could have spent a few weeks, but she wanted to move into the new house at the same time I did.

This is my problem: She never gives us a moment to ourselves. When we call on my personal friends or go to the movies, she goes with us, although she goes somewhere nearly every day while I am at business. Every evening, she sits with us in the living room until we retire. At table, the conversation centers around her friends and relatives, whom I do not know and in whom I am not interested. She follows us wherever we go about the house and grounds. When my husband is working in the garden, she sits by the window and watches him.

My husband and I have been talking of going out West to visit my people, whom I have not seen for several years. Now his mother hints that she has never been West and would like to go with us. My husband says he thinks it would be nice for her to go, too. And she made the statement the other day that she is not going North this summer. I replied that we would have to make arrangements for someone to stay with her, then, while the two of us are away on vacation. She answered that she "guessed she could stay with her daughter," but she did not say it convincingly.

Recently, my husband suggested it would be nice if we drove North and visited her people, although he never has done so before. This means she would be with us on our vacation. I do not like the idea of never having a moment to myself; of never going anywhere but someone goes with us; and of spending my vacation with the very person whom I would like to escape from for a little while. Sometimes I feel like a prisoner under constant guard. I do not have even Saturday afternoons to call my own, as this is her day for visiting her daughter and my husband has to drive her over and always insists that I go along.

What am I to do in a situation like this? When I talk to my husband he says I am selfish and that it will not hurt me to talk to his mother every evening when I am home from work. He says she is old and must be given every possible consideration. It is not that I have anything against her. It is just that I would like to have my own life. D. I. E.

It Is Man's Duty To Correct Situation

DEAR D. I. E.: Judged by saint-hood's standards of altruism, perhaps you are selfish in obstinately arguing for a "life of your own" with your husband, in which his mother is not an ubiquitous, central figure. But he is even more selfish in permitting, perpetuating and condoning an arrangement which gives him—at the expense of your natural desire for conjugal privacy—the emotional income of both the petted child and married man. And you have not only his selfishness to combat, but also his mother's—which certainly puts you in the position of being more sinned against than sinning.

It was exceedingly tactless, indeed, almost maliciously intrusive, of her to move in with you the day you started housekeeping. Plainly she is envious and jealous of you; and very much afraid that her son may, through his marriage, outlive his erstwhile "little boy" devotion to her. This she has no intention of letting him do; and the only means she knows of holding her own against you is to stick as close to him as a Siamese twin. Her behavior is wrong; and her son is wrong in sentimentally abetting her in her (deliberately or unconsciously) subversive "shadowing."

It is his responsibility to take the lead in a partnership plan of of action which silently and unanswerably proclaims that the marriage is an exclusive mutual relationship; that the domestic arrangement is by no means comparable to a three-legged stool in which she is the indispensable third "prop."

For instance, he should insist, with inexorable gentle courtesy, that she choose this summer between a visit with her daughter and her customary trip "up north," while he vacations with his wife. Another summer, he might drive her out west with you; or take you north with her. But only after he has definitely demonstrated that he cherishes a fellowship with his wife that exists independently of his filial concern for his mother.

She is guilty of bad manners; even of wilful, subtle trouble making; in cheating you out of long, confidential interludes with your husband—by sitting up with you until bedtime, by dominating table talk, by tagging along when you go calling or to the movies, etc. In very appreciation of your hospitality, she should keep herself out from underfoot as much as possible. She should maintain cheerful ceremony about spending time with you, either in the living room or elsewhere. She should await a joint invitation, sincerely extended—and everybody knows the difference between a perfunctory and a heartfelt bid.

If she were not your jealous adversary, she would deliberately make plans of her own which would leave your husband no choice but to "beau" you in your corresponding leisure hours. Her plans for her own vacation would be completed, subject to no change, long before yours were discussed. Of evenings, she would have letters to write, books to or a radio program to follow in her own room. Or she would have a movie to see, with a contemporary-age crony; or church services to attend; or some adventurous cooking and baking to do, behind closed kitchen doors.

But she is jealous of you—because she is lonely and fearful after the manner of the childishly aging, who have neglected to expand their interests beyond those life forced upon them in their twenties, thirties or forties. Her son is the apple of her eye, and she is greedily snatching at every possible minute of companionship with him, in what she no doubt considers to be "the few remaining years of her life."

You have a tough problem to solve; and as I have already indicated, there is little you can do successfully or happily to alter the picture, without your husband's sympathetic and masterful cooperation. And if his marriage turns out to be a hotbed of suppressed hostility between wife and mother, the fault will be mostly his; because he alone has the power to give each her just due, and thus evoke an honorable peace. M. H.

A Woman's New York

Frank Case Writing Book About Algonquin; Hotel Famous as Haunt for Writers and Actors

New York, May 13.

WHEN SOME business or free-spender doesn't ask me to lunch at some swell inn or Park avenue beanery, I much prefer to hang about the Algonquin, the homey little hotel in Forty-fourth street. Long famous as haunt of writers and actors, it is now the noonday place for business and professional girls, and I'm sure to meet up with a few chums there.

ALICE HUGHES

Lunching there the other day with Alice Hagar, of Washington, who had just publicized the League of Women Voters convention, Landlord Frank Case came over to the table and we bandied a few words. He did a good book called "Tales of a Wayward Inn" on his place a couple of years ago, and now he has another on the fire. He's filling it with more anecdotes on the Algonquin and the people who adorn it or infest it. One of the latter is the man or woman who comes up and says "I guess you don't know who I am." These are the people who want to get clubby with the chief to have a check cashed or get some other privilege. He may name his new tome that.

Another hotel character Frank calls the "Habeas Corpus"—a man or woman who brings other folks to stop at the place. Cheap clothing stores call them "puller-inners," and in the carnival world they are known as "shills." But Frank dubs such a "Habeas Corpus," or, in vlugar English, "produce the bady!"

At the next table were Frank's brilliant daughter, Margaret, still taking bows for her clever profile of Dorothy Thompson in The New Yorker, and Greta Keller, Viennese singer who has been a big hit in the hotel's supper club.

Always interesting news when he-man Ernest Hemingway has another book about to pop. This one is called "For Whom the Bells Toll," and the virile literatus is finishing it down at Key West, Fla. That interesting spot seems to be getting a great play as a writers' hideaway. My fiction writing girl friend, Thelma Strabel, has just fixed up a house down there. The other day she gave a party here to celebrate her first cracking of the Saturday Evening Post with a serial.

Exercise Aids In Sleeping, Eases Tension

Don't Think of Work When You Settle Down for Rest

By Ida Jean Kain

IN THE good old days, when one's living was earned by the sweat of the brow, insomnia was unheard of. That's because exercise of the large muscles produces the kind of physical tiredness that makes for sleep. Exercise of the small muscles—the eyes, or the fingers in skilled activity—produces nervous strain. Residual tension—that tension that carries over—leads to insomnia.

There are different types of insomnia: inability to get to sleep, fitful sleeping, or waking up hours before it is time to get up. After a time, insomnia of any kind makes you feel as if you are at the end of your rope! That increases your worry about sleeping. As a matter of fact, about 60 per cent of all insomnia is supposed to be caused by anxiety about it. You can even get so that you start worrying about noon for fear you will not get a good night's sleep—and the chances are that you won't. If you expect insomnia, you will have it.

Training Essential

Try to train yourself not to think about your work when you settle down to sleep. Thinking out an act is accompanied by a slight tension in the muscles, the tension spread from one muscle group to another, and soon you are tossing about, afraid you will not be able to get to sleep at all, which further increases the tension.

Any number of schemes have been used for turning off the thought processes. Some people think black—a deep, velvety black. Others try to make their minds blank, like a slate. When a thought comes on, they wipe the slate clean. Then there is the trick of contracting each set of muscles separately and then letting go with all the muscles.

Waking up in the night is often caused by indigestion. The solution to that is to have a light meal, avoiding fried or other heavy foods and stimulating beverages. You should take plenty of time to eat and it might be a good idea to have the evening meal a bit earlier.

Outside influences, like light and noise, are sleep thieves. Sleep shades, which cover the eyes, can be purchased at department stores, and ear plugs, made of wax and cotton so they do not harm the ears, are on sale at most drug stores.

Exercise Is Helpful

Enough physical exercise is not the whole answer, but it seems to be the surest cure for insomnia. Healthful muscular fatigue induces relaxation, and it has been proved that the better you can relax, the deeper you can sleep. It may be that you are sticking too close to your work and need more fresh air, more exercise outdoors—more physical recreation and less mental stimulation! We have to earn a living and we can't be outdoors much during the day, but a leisurely walk after dinner, staying out of doors for an hour or more, is conductive to better sleep. Office workers should try to spend as much times as possiends.

If you have trouble sleeping, calisthenics just before retiring are probably too stimulating—but a good workout during the day would help immeasurbaly in combating nervous tensions.

From all the research on sleep, it appears to be definitely established that sleep comes more easily when you have had a moderate amount of exercise, are not overly tired, have enough food in your stomach but not too much, and think about nothing!

Wadd's Inning

Mrs. Marmaduke Wadd's campaign to wrest the presidency of the Do Something About It League from Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey is gaining momentum.

Mrs. Wadd (Arabella as she is known to her intimates) announced yesterday she was making a special drive to capture the Nation's youth. The wealthy widow of the nut cup tycoon, who has bitterly attacked the type of hats Mrs. DeGoofey wears, was resplendent in a brand new chapeau when she received reporters.

MRS. WADD

"What do you think of Mrs. DeGoofey's new sailor?" was the first question hurled at her by the eager newshawks

"It looks as if she made it herself," replied Mrs. Wadd.

"What do you think about the indorsement of Mrs. DeGoofey by the Association for Advancement?" asked a Civic Association editor.

Debs' Committee To Aid Wadd

"I am not at all worried," was the reply. "I have already formed a junior campaign committee to be headed by Miss Gloria Goozle, glamour deb, to combat the efforts of the Association for Advancement. Miss Goozle will hold a large cocktail party tomorrow at the Hotel Swank to make campaign plans. She will also entertain at a series of small luncheons during the week to organize a finance committee. Later the junior group will hold a fashion show, a garden party and possibly a large dance."

GLORIA GOODE

Drawing a sheaf of letters from her mammoth handbag, Mrs. Wadd further announced she had received indorsements from "the most worthwhile organizations of the country."

"This is from the Right Thinkers' Brigade," she said, holding up a letter. "They are behind me to a woman. Here is another indorsement from the Society for the Preservation of Feather Boas. Just look a the names on this letterhead."

"Better Element" Takes Stand

"And here I have a very warm letter of praise from the League of Leading Women. Here is another from the Better Element Association, still another from the Heiresses' Committee to Cut Taxes. And here are two of which I am especially proud, as they are from men's groups—The Male Antique Lovers, and the Raconteurs' Croquet Club. I also have a letter from Senator Tweet in which he offers to take the stump against Mrs. De Goofey."

"Have you any reply to Mrs. DeGoofey's recent campaign promises?" asked a political correspondent.

"I can out-promise Mrs. DeGoofey on anything she can offer," was the reply. "But my newest and most important promise is—three sandwiches for every woman at every large tea."

"Don't they already get all the sandwiches they want?" asked the editor of a reducers' column.

Three Sandwiches For Every Guest

"Only the more aggressive ones," replied Mrs. Wadd. "According to tea etiquette, each guestt is supposed to eat only two sandwiches and one cookie. But I intend to make it permissible, even cumpulsory for every guest to have three sandwiches and at least two cookies—even if I have to provide them out of my private fortune.

"I also promise bigger and better costume jewelry for women this summer—bigger beads, louder bracelets, shinier clips, so they will get more notice. Then I am promising two and three gardenia corsages instead of one—the florists are co-operating beautifully with me on this—and also larger handbags for club women and reformers. In fact, I promise to make everything bigger and better for women—even husbands."

"Are you planning any speeches, Mrs. Wadd?" asked a political publicity man.

"No indeed. Unlike Mrs. DeGoofey, I am doing everything on a refined scale. All I expect to do in the immediate future is to hold a small exclusive tea."

"Where will it be?" asked a society editor.

"I had intended having it in the ballroom of the Hotel Arabesque," was the reply, "but my guest list has grown so that I have decided to take over Griffith Stadium."

Habit Training For Children Is Advised

Uncle Sam gives sound advice to parents on habit formation in a United States Department of Labor bulletin entitled, "The Child From One To Six."

"Children not only learn the habit of getting into their clothes," the bulletin states, "but they learn to like certain colors and to dislike a dirty dress or a torn stocking. So they develop the habits which are called 'good taste' or 'neatness' or 'daintiness.' Even attitudes toward life are partly a matter of habit. Children learn to be cheerful and happy, or sulky and cross, according to the habits they form.

"Teaching a child to do habitually and without conscious effort the things that make for good health is one of the first duties of parents. The health habits have to do with the fundamental daily activities of the child—eating, sleeping, playing, eliminating and keeping the body clean and suitably clothed. Most of these habits should be learned in the first three or four years of life. Once learned they may last a lifetime."

Much Heralded Nylon Hose Goes on Sale Here Tomorrow

By Marshall Adams

The Post Fashion Editor.

FOR SEVERAL years science has been seeking to meet one of womankind's most urgent needs—a silk stocking that was at once rugged and beautiful.

Marshall Adams

The result of these long, perplexing hours in the chemist's laboratory has been nylon hose, about which everyone in America has heard. That is, almost everyone knows something about nylon, often just snatches gathered from the remarks of the few women in each community who have sampled nylon hose. The real story of what this mysterious nylon is all about will be told tomorrow when these hose go on sale for the first time Fortunately, this first distribution date falls on Government pay day.

As most women know by now, nylon, created from coal, air and water by the du Pont laboratories, will be the first serious rivals to silk stockings. This all-American move on the part of native chemists experimenting with native products and giving employment to American labor, is certainly in keeping with America's desire to be self-sufficient.

Cotton Mesh For Sports

However, whether the American woman will discard pure silk entirely remains to be seen. The nylon stocking is stronger, more elastic, more sheer and holds its shape better than others, but neither du Pont nor Van Raalte, the pioneer maker of these hose, will guarantee "no runs." There yet isn't a hose made that will refuse to run when snagged.

Another scientist who has taken hosiery to the operating table is the United States Government. The Department of Agriculture, ever alert for economical uses of native products, has been working for two years on the development of smart cotton stockings, impelled by a domestic cotton surplus of 10,000,000 bales at present. A cotton mesh knit, excellent for sports or street wear, is the result of this research, and it is hoped by cotton pickers that it will click—especially for those who don't want too sheer a stocking for country clothes.

Two Lose Appeals In Numbers Cases

Persons who play the numbers game are properly excluded from juries trying the cases of those who run the games, the United States Court of Appeals declared yesterday.

The court rejected the appeals of Richard Smith, who was sentenced to 6 to 24 months in jail, and Geraldine J. Hall, who was sentenced on charges of violating the lottery laws. They complained that by having six numbers playing jurors excused, the prosecutors used more challenges than the law allowed.

'Victory Luncheon' Held at Willard Hotel, With Brown Bestowing Honorary Police Memberships; Summer Camp Opens June 29

The Metropolitan Police Boys' Club has completed the most successful campaign for funds since its founding in 1934. Morris Cafritz, president, announced yesterday. Receipts from the drive totaled $99,600 in cash and pledges, he reported. The goal was $86,000.

At a "victory luncheon" in the Willard Hotel, volunteer leaders and workers in the campaign were lauded by Cafritz, Commissioner David McCoach and Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent.

Badges of honorary membership in the Police Department were presented to Brig. Gen Albert L. Cox, leader of last year's fund-raising drive; Mack L. Langford, leader this year; L. Gordon Leech, secretary, and James E. Colliflower, president of the club for four years ending in 1939.

In addition, Colliflower was given a framed resolution of appreciation recently adopted by the club's board of directors.

What started as an "experiment" in 1934 has grown into an organization of more than 14,000 underprivileged boys, Maj. Brown told the meeting. He said plans are ready to open the club's summer camp June 29.

2 Children Hurt As Cars Driven By Parents Crash

Two children were injured yesterday in a two-car collision at Fifth and Cedar streets northwest.

Elizabeth Hemstreet, 9, of 215 Buffalo avenue, Takoma Park, Md., was treated for cuts on the forehead. She was riding in a sedan operated by her mother, Mrs. Georgia E. Hemstreet.

Carl Howe, 11, of 1616 Taylor street northwest, riding in the second car, also driven by his mother, Mrs. Julian M. Howe, was taken to Washington Sanitarium. He was treated for a fracture of the right arm and injuries to the left leg.

tion to provide pensions for veterans' dependents.

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, who sponsored District reforms in the House for the last two years, was not on the floor. He was defeated for renomination last week in the Baltimore primary, and will not return to Congress next year.

The death of the Kennedy bill adds another chapter to the long history of civic and legislative efforts to modernize the commission government of the District that was established in 1878.

In the absence of Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee, Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, called up the six noncontroversial District bills, which would:

Extend authority of the Board of Education over the issuance of diplomas by junior colleges.

Permit insane residents of the

The Kennedy bill itself underwent drastic modifications following prolonged public hearings last year. The schools and libraries and parks were left independent after being first placed under a single administrative head.

The Board of Commissioners was left intact although the original legislation proposed that it be replaced by an appointed city council. The number of departments was reduced in response to a suggestion by the President.

The final emasculation work was don by the Commissioners' "kitchen cabinet," and Kennedy adopted their recommendations as his own. All controversial provisions, as far as the local citizenry and municipal officials were concerned, were eliminated.

The only objection that had been heard came from the General Accounting Office, which has had a prolonged row with Auditor Daniel J. Donovan over the municipal system of accounts. The Budget Bureau now passes upon all District budgets before they reach Congress.

President Roosevelt on several occasions has indicated he favored a reform in the District system of government. Early in his first term he leaned toward the restoration of the office of governor, and later he was inclined toward a city manager.

Virgin Islands to enter St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Amend slightly the District life insurance act.

Provide for the regulation of fire, marine and casualty insurance companies.

Authorize life insurance companies to sell "creditor group policies."

Authorize the Public Works Administration to advance $500,000 to the District for the construction of an office for the recorder of deeds.

Besides the reorganization bill, Schulte left on the House calendar measures to liberalize the police and firement's retirement law, to amend the child labor law, and to authorize price-fixing agreements in liquor sales.

Meets Death In Flaming Car

GEORGE HOFMANN believed man who was chained and burned to death in auto. (Story, Page 1)

Ex-Kaiser, in Exile, Awaiting Arrival of Triumphant Nazis

When the Dutch royal family fled to England yesterday, it repeated history 145 years old and left behind another royal family long inured to exile.

No one knows how former Kaiser Wilhelm II, of Germany, who fled to Amerongen, Holland, November 10, 1918, will receive the armies of Germany's new ruler should they reach his retreat at Doorn, between Arnheim and Utrecht. Since May 15, 1920, he has been at Doorn watching the world struggle back from the holocaust into which he was said to have plunged it in 1914. On the basis of last night's communiques, German columns, battering westward from Arnheim, must be very near to Doorn.

Reports have trickled out of Doorn that Wilhelm has seen Germany tread the road to war again with great misgiving. One on September 9, 1939, said that the ex-Kaiser, now king of 17 acres of Dutch woodland, had warned Hitler: "You face a disaster that might prove far greater than in 1918." On October 5 came another report that the Fuehrer had stopped Wilhelm's monthly allowance from the Reich.

Be that as it may, if the former Kaiser, now 81, looks again on German troops, they will be far different fellows from those he sent raging into Belgium 26 years ago in their big boots and spiked helmets; from the Uhlans whose long lances wrote "schrecklichkeit" in red across the lexicon of war.

The royal family, which left him to meet the troops of another Germany, fled, as did William V in 1795, to refuge in England. How long Queen Wilhelmina and the Crown Princess Juliana and her two children will remain there is on the lap of the gods; William V died in England, and his son, the Prince of Orange, did not return to England until Napoleon's defeat at Leipzig in 1813.

William V, like Wilhelmina, scurried from his homeland in the face of a nineteenth century blitzkrieg.

Wife of Undersecretary Gives Tea For Ladies of Scientific Congress Delegates; Misses Moore Plan Coffee Party

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WIVES AND DAUGHTERS of delegates from the American Republics to the eighth American Scientific Congress were feted at a tea given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Sumner Welles, wife of the Undersecretary of State.

The party, which took place at the Sulgrave Club from 5 to 6 p. m., was one of a long list that have been planned in connection with the congress. The Misses Margaret and Jennie Moore, sisters of the Counselor of the State Department, will entertain the ladies at a coffee party in their garden at Fairfax, Va., this morning at 11 o'clock. Mrs. Roosevelt will receive the same group this afternoon at 3:30 p. m.

Hope Ridings Miller

Gay and informal was yesterday's tea, arranged specifically as a fete for women from "the other Americas."

Receiving at the head of the stairway, Mrs. Welles was trimly turned out in a frock of black and white print, worn with a broad-brimmed black straw hat. Among the hostesses who stood with her to greet the guests were Mrs. Adolf A. Berle, jr., Mrs. Henry F. Grady, wearing a turquoise crepe ensemble; Mrs. Breckinridge Long, in a green and white outfit; Mrs. Stanley Reed and Miss Mary Winslow.

Mrs. Cordell Hull, attired in a smart black and white costume, generally assisted. The tea table around which guests gathered and lingered, was centered with a mixed bouquet of spring blossoms, flanked with clusters of tall white tapers in silver candelabra. When I stopped by for a cup of tea Mrs. Archibald MacLeish and Mrs. Isaiah Bowman were pouring.

Mrs. Laurence Duggan, chairman of the women's hospitality committee, was here, there and everywhere, seeing that guests enjoyed themselves. Her frock of gray chiffon was fashioned with a tucked jacket and was worn with a black turban accented in white. Also generally assisting was Mrs. Stanley Woodward, who wore a small white hat to match the white jacket over her black skirt.

Mrs. Thomas Burke, in a black and white ensemble, was steering practically everybody in the direction of Senora de Calderon, Chilean delegate to the congress. Senora de De Bayle was glimpsed in the crowd; as were several other envoys' wives, including Senora de Alfaro and Senora De Pastoriza.

Pretty Miss Lolanda Alfaro was seen mingling in the throng as were Miss Ellen Carter, Mrs. Hiram Bingham, the Misses Margaret and Jennie Moore, Mrs. Thomas Dawson and her daughter, Miss Lilita Dawson, and scores of others.

From California comes news that Miss Peggy Bennett Vogel, daughter of Gen. Clayton B. Vogel, U. S. M. C., and Mrs. Vogel will sail from San Francisco today on an Army transport for the Canal Zone. She will go straight to Balboa, where on May 25 she will become the bride of Lieut. Edward Wilson DuRant, jr., U. S. M. C., son of Dr. E. W. DuRant of Georgetown, S. C.

The engagement was made known here last July shortly before Gen. Vogel and his family moved from Washington to San Diego. Miss Vogel is a descendant of Samuel Chase, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, and of Commodore Joshua Barney of American Revolutionary fame. She attended Western High School and Temple Business College here and the American School in Port au Prince, Haiti. Lieut. DuRant was graduated from the Citadel in 1934 and was stationed at the Charleston (S. C.) Navy Yard before being ordered to the Canal Zone.

After a short honeymoon, Lieut. DuRant and his bride will have quarters on the Coco Solo submarine base. He is assigned to the U. S. S. J. Fred Talbott with the special service squadron.

About the Town with DUDLEY HARMON

THE NETHERLANDS MINISTER, now in the same unfortunate limelight which has shifted from one European envoy to another here this winter, is, besides being a good diplomat, an excellent singer. His specialty is old French songs of the seventeenth and eighteenth century and his attractive blonde wife accompanied him at the piano . . . The United States Legation at The Hague—a window of which was shattered the other day by a bomb explosion—used to be the residence of a member of the Dutch royal family. The house has beautiful old murals, celebrated throughout all Holland . . . John Cudahy, our Ambassador to Belgium, is married and has two children, but fortunately they are not with him, according to his niece, Miss Ann Dahlman, of Washington. The ambassadorship to Poland, which he held for six years, was his first diplomatic post. Before that Mr. Cudahy was a businessman. His favorite recreation is big game hunting, which has taken him to Alaska and Africa. He has written several books on the subject.

COMMANDER AND MRS. Hamilton Bryan have returned to Washington after a year in California. The former looks sunburned and healthy in spite of his recent illness and has suddenly taken up painting. Mrs. Bryan says that on the drive East their car was so loaded with easels and paint boxes that there was hardly enough room for her. Commander Bryan has already had one exhibit in California.

THE POPULAR COUPLE will be here until July, after which Commander Bryan reports for duty in California. They were the center of attraction at a small cocktail party given over the week-end by two Georgetown neighbors whose tiny walled gardens adjoin. Between there's a high brick wall with a little gate, through which the guests wandered back and forth. On the tops of the walls were pots of red geraniums and also three little colored children of the neighborhood, who climbed up and solemnly watched the proceedings for a while.

AMONG THE GUESTS: Mrs. Clarence Hay, of New York, who has been visiting her son, John Hay; Miss Sylvia Szechenyi, wearing a short fur wrap over her rose and white print and no hat on her blonde curls; Miss Elia O'Day, daughter of Representative Caroline O'Day, who said she hopes to accompany her mother to the Democratic Convention this summer, and Commander and Mrs. Charles Baker—the latter has done over several charming old houses in Georgetown.

A YOUNG FINN who came over after the war to help at the legation here, was sampling his first mint julep—and was restrained by the other guests from eating the mint, too. Mrs. George Pettingill, wearing a green and gray wool suit and a jaunty little cap; Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding and Capt. and Mrs. M. L. Deyo were others present.

Among the "extra men" were George T. Summerlin, chief of protocol of the State Department, and Eddie Gardner, who says he wished he'd waited until spring really arrived here before leaving Nassau and Palm Beach.

THE HOWE-BURLING masquerade party was such a success that it lasted until 5 in the morning. Most of the costumes were on the comic side, but one which was unusually pretty as well as the real thing was Mrs. Anthony Rumbold's Greek soldier outfit. All white, it had a wide flaring skirt with a tremendous number of starched petticoats. With this she wore knee-length white socks and a red-tassled cap.

Campaign to Compel Congress to Inaugurate Reforms Here Is Advocated by Mrs. Eugene Meyer

'Inexcusable Retardation of Social Progress' In Washington Is Blamed on the Lack Of Efficient Governmental Machinery

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Laying at the door of Congress responsibility for the "neglected youth" of the District, Mrs. Eugene Meyer yesterday urged that the women of the Capital inaugurate a campaign to "force our Federal legislators to realize that we are tired of the ancient system of government which prevails in our city."

"In justice to the children of Washington" should be the slogan, she said.

Speaking before a luncheon meeting of the Washington Section of the National Council of Jewish Women at Woodmont Country Club, Mrs. Meyer, who is chairman of the District Committee of the Child Welfare League of America and a member of the board of the Council of Social Agencies, blamed the "inexcusable retardation of social progress in Washington" on lack of efficient Government machinery.

"It is an ironic truth that in the Capital of the greatest democratic Nation, this efficient machinery not only does not exist, but cannot be achieved under the circumstances which now prevail. We are caught between a cross-fire of authority; between Congress and such local government as we possess; there is a complete lack of any comprehensive integrated plan of government. The result as one of many citizens' committees recently reported is, "a duplication and overlapping of services, lack of centralized responsibility, unnecessary duplication of overhead, conflicts in authority, inconvenience to citizens and taxpayers, and waste in public expenditures, not through the fault of public officials but because of the needless complexity of the governmental structure they must administer.

D. C. Reorganization Long Overdue

"A reorganization of the District government is long overdue, and what I should like to propose to you today is that without relaxing our efforts on behalf of child welfare we should realize that we cannot get commensurate results unless we combine the efforts of all Washington's public-spirited men and women to demand some form of local autonomy. With patchwork improvements we are simply wasting our time and energy. Conditions are rapidly growing more chaotic and instead of giving way to indifference and despair we must strike at the heart of the problem and demand, by sensational means if reason is rejected, that the government of the Nation's Capital be put in order.

"Let the women of Washington bring home to Congress that the children of Washington are the greatest victims of this situation, make Congress understand that they are directly responsible for delinquency, malnutrition, thwarted and even criminal lives, and surely we can make the more sensitive and responsible Representatives realize that something must be done, and done at once.

"The budget situation is perhaps the clearest proof of the injustice of the whole tangle. The budget has been a bone of contention between Congress and the citizens for a good 50 years, and for the present the quarrel is no nearer a satisfactory solution than it ever has been. The budget procedure is in itself a tortuous maze in which every person having any authority over the final outcome is interested only in economizing at the expense of the District and the taxpayers.

Doubts Their Interest In Social Welfare

"This elaborate performance gives many American citizens including some in the District, an unshakable impression that Congress and Federal moneys support the District. Actually, the Federal contribution is a mere pittance and most of the budget comes out of the taxpayers' pockets as it does anywhere else. The extraordinary fact is that as the cost of running the District became greater, due to the great influx of Federal employes, the more the Congressional contributions have decreased. Up to 1932, the Federal appropriation had been $9,000,000 or more, but in 1933 it sank to roughly $8,000,000, and since then has never much exceeded $5,000,000. In fact that sum seems to have hypnotized Congress, for last year it was exactly $5,000,000 out of a budget of $50,412,000—or less than 10 per cent of the total.

"It is not without significance that the Federal Administration which has been most profligate in the distribution of money throughout the country, has shown the least concern and given the least support to the social problems of the voteless District and of those closest to their doors. Don't tell me that such people are genuinely interested in human welfare.

"How long is this well-to-do community going to endure this Congressional tutelage? For Washington can actually afford the best possible kind of government," she said, quoting statistics from the report issued in 1938 on education in the District. "The income of our citizens coming as it does largely from the Federal Government is a steady one, unaffected as in other cities by business depressions. The average income is higher than in comparable American cities. The median value of homes in the District is $9,246, almost twice as high as the $4,778 throughout the country. The average number of automobiles, radios and monthly rentals is higher than in 17 other comparable cities. Moreover, these other cities have to pay State as well as municipal taxes, whereas, in the District all taxes can be expended for local services. It is obvious that the Nation's Capital, even without the income from Federally owned land, has a greater economic ability to pay for Government services than has the typical American city of comparable size.

Mrs. Louis Ottenberg Is Among Speakers

"The President is trying hard to reorganize the Federal Government in order to achieve greater economy, and efficiency. Why does it not occur to him that the government of the city in which he has been living for the past eight years is just as much in need of reorganization? If we cannot reorganize a small unit like the District government, why should we be able to do a big job like the Federal reorganization?"

Other speakers on the luncheon program which was sponsored by the child welfare and legislative sections of the council, were Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, past president of the organization and also of the Voteless D. C. League of Women Voters, and Mark Lansburgh, chairman of the Citizens Advisory Committee on Child Welfare. Mrs. Ottenberg discussed the Kepecs report and Mr. Lansburgh told of the setup and aims of the committee.

Mrs. Lillian Detre, chairman of the legislative section, opened the meeting. Mrs. Leo A. Diamond, child welfare chairman, presided. Mrs. Edward Sonneborn, president of the section, and other officers, were guests of honor at the luncheon.

Democrat Club Hears Mrs. Ross

More than $26,000,000 has been expended by the Works Progress Administration in the District, of which more than $24,000,000 was paid out in the form of wages, according to Mrs. Mary Steele Ross, director of the Division of Professional and Service Projects for the District, in an address yesterday at the regular Monday luncheon meeting of the Woman's National Democratic Club.

Mrs. D. Tucker Brown, president of the club, introduced the speaker, who prefaced her facts and figures on WPA accomplishments in Washington, by calling attention to the fact that the period between May 20 and May 25 has been designated, "This Work Pays Your Community Week." During that time, opportunity will be offered for residents of this city to visit projects and decide for themselves whether or not the Federal work relief expenditures have been worth while.

Such tours for members of the Woman's National Democratic Club are being arranged by the education committee and cars will be provided for transporting members from the clubhouse, at 1526 New Hampshire avenue northwest, to various WPA projects.

"We have served more than 5,400,000 nutritious meals to undernourished school children," said Mrs. Ross.

Woman's Board of Methodist Home Will Hold Tea and Shower Tomorrow

THE WOMAN'S BOARD of the Methodist Home for the Aged is arranging a tea and spring shower tomorrow afternoon at the home, Connecticut avenue and Ellicott street, in celebration of its fifty-first anniversary. The tea will be from 3 to 10 p. m. with Mrs. Oliver B. Jenkins as general chairman.

This year, instead of concentrating chiefly on gifts of linens, the Methodist churches which support the home will make many cash gifts. These will go into a fund for the installation of an elevator, which is much needed.

Mrs. Harry Hoskinson for some years has served as president of the board. Assisting her and Mrs. Jenkins with the arrangements for the tea and shower are Mrs. Edwin Dice, vice chairman of the general committee; Mrs. Harry Underwood, in charge of hospitality, assisted by the official board and members from Foundry Church; Mrs. J. E. Strobel, in charge of the candy table, assisted by Mrs. Howell Bartle; Mrs. W. W. Marlow, cakes. Mrs. J. Stanley Long will pour, assisted by members of the Ministers' Wives Association.

Decorations will be under the direction of Mrs. Harold Boyle, a resident of the home, and the table with needlework made by those of the home "family" will be arranged by Mrs. Iris Baker, Mrs. Mary Fry and Miss Willie English.

AND while we're mentioning members of the "family" just a word about Mrs. Mary Hatcher who is 99—oldest in point of years but probably the youngest so far as activity and interest go. She participates in all of the events which take place there and thinks nothing of walking two or three miles to any point se wants to reach in the city.

DISTINGUISHED GUESTS—Senora Amanda de Labarca, of Santiago, Chile, will be a guest of honor at the luncheon which the Peoples Mandate Committee is giving today at the Carlton for Senora de Alvarez-Calderon, of Lima. Senora de Labarca is a delegate of Chile to the American Scientific Congress, which convenes here tomorrow. She is a professor of education in the University of Chile and is well known in this country, where she has lectured in many universities and colleges. Senora de Labarca is much interested in the position of women and is the author of a book, "Where Are Women Going?"

Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, also will be a guest of honor.

EXCELSIOR CLUB ELECTS—The Excelsior Literary Club has elected Mrs. Lucien Sanders as its president. Other new officers are Mrs. George Hill, first vice president; Mrs. Alfred W. Foster, second vice president; Mrs. Charles Delaney, treasurer; Mrs. Robert F. Hall, Mrs. Alice V. Creque, Mrs. Douglas Palmer, press correspondent; Mrs. Arthur L. Hayford, director to the federation, and Mrs. Mattie Q. Ewing, alternate; Mrs. Harvey Beaver, yearbook chairman.

BIRTHDAY DINNER—U. S. S. Jacob Jones Post of the American Legion will observe its twenty-first anniversary Wednesday, May 22, with an anniversary dinner at the Kennedy-Warren at 7 o'clock. Edna P. Smith is the commander of the post, members of which served as yeomanettes in the war.

Recreation Is Urged For Americanization

Public recreation activities are called practical "Americanization" of a highly necessary kind by Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, who has been reappointed sponsor of the National Recreation Association for Washington.

In a letter to local members of the association, Mrs. Bliss said this type of citizenship work was beyond the experimental stage.

Mt. Vernon Ladies Read Quotation Of Washington

A quotation from a book long out of print, "Maxims of Washington," published in 1894 by Appleton & Co., was read yesterday at the meeting of the Mount Vernon Ladies Association, now in session at Mount Vernon, because of its application to the present.

It was entitled "America and Europe," and follows:

"With respect to the nations of Europe, their situation appears so awful that nothing short of Omnipotence can predict the issue, although every human mind must feel the misery it endures.

"Our course is plain; they who run may read it. Theirs is so bewildered and dark, so entangled and embarrassed, and so obviously under the influence of intrigue, that one would suppose if anything could open the eyes of our misled citizens, that the deplorable situation of these peoples could not fail to affect it."

Miss Anita Furness, new vice regent Minnesota, daughter of a former vice regent, arrived yesterday to attend the session.

Join Citizen Bodies, Urges Judge Cayton

Every Capitalite Should Be Member Of Some Group, West Enders Told

Every Washingtonian should be a member of a citizens association, Judge Nathan Cayton of the Municipal Court, last night told more than 50 members of the West End Citizens Association at the organization's annual dinner held at the Fairfax Hotel.

Pointing out that Washington is a city without a vote he declared that "as a result people should take more than an average interest in civic affairs."

Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter reminisced briefly of past years of the West End Citizens Association of which he has been a member for 20 years. Toastmaster was Walter F. Wasson, president of the group.

Entertainment included Paul McCrea, ventriloquist, and his dummy, "Oswald." Featured were readings and solos by children of the Grant School, and dramatics by students of the Marjorie Webster School. A dance followed.

National Gateway

The National Gateway Citizens Association last night went on record as favoring a new and stringent building regulation code and the assurance of adequate inspection to eliminate fire hazards.

At its monthly meeting, the association elected Everett Evans president, and adopted other resolutions favoring increased Congressional appropriations for the District, and the revision of the District's code of laws.

Complaining that the failure of certain property owners to drain surface water from their land injured the property of others, the association asked for a law permitting the District government to order drainage of such water. The law should grant the Government authority to do the work and charge it to the owner, if the owner failed to act, the resolution stated.

The association expressed its disapproval of the Seccombe bill, which would premit all individuals to enter theaters, athletic games, and restaurants, regardless of race, creed, or religion.

Other officers elected last night included Bennett G. Miller, vice president; Mrs. Marie Cuthbertson, secretary; Walter S. Ahlberg, treasurer; L. M. Green, financial secretary; Green and J. Fairburn, delegates to the Northeast Conference of Citizens Associations, and Evans and Mrs. Nold, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Park View

In a brief final meeting of the season, Park View Citizens Association adopted a resolution last night urging that the site at Thirteenth and Upshur streets northwest be used for Wilson Teachers College and a recreation center, and that it should not be used for the Abbott Vocational School.

The House has approved a bill which provides for construction of the new Abbott school in Brentwood Park northeast, but several organizations, including the Central Labor Union, are seeking support to block the action in the Senate and change the site to Thirteenth and Upshur streets.

Hill Crest

J. W. Martin was reelected president of the Hill Crest Citizens Association last night.

Other new officers are Samuel Bass, vice president; Leroy Mack, second vice president; P. A. Willis, treasurer; Malcolm T. Turpin, secretary. J. J. MacGregor and Mack will be delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

The association urged the Board of Education to include in its next budget an item for purchase of a new school site in the Hill Crest section.

It also asked that stop signs be erected immediately at all corners of the intersection at Branch and Alabama avenues southeast, and that traffic lights be installed as soon as possible.

Kalorama

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chief of police, was petitioned to offer a reward for the apprehension of fire bugs in Washington by the Kalorama Citizens Association at a meeting last night at the John Quincy Adams School, Nineteenth street and Florida avenue northwest. Additional police also were requested.

The Public Utilities Commission was petitioned to remove the safety zone at Columbia road and California street northwest. A motion picture of the work of the District Tuberculosis Association was shown.

Tribute was paid to C. Hayward Marshall, chairman of the membership committee of the Washington Board of Trade, last night by more than 100 members of the organization with a dinner gathering at the Mayflower Hotel. A watch was presented him as appreciation for his work as head of the committee for the past year.

Incoming chairman of the committee is Henry Owens. Speakers complimenting Marshall last night included Col. David McCoach, Engineer Commissioner for the District; newly elected Chairman of the Board James E. Colliflower, and Lawrence E. Williams, retiring chairman.

A Truthful Robber

A colored man who robbed three small boys didn't mind the charge but chided the court yesterday for an inaccuracy in the amount taken.

Asked why he didn't plead guilty, the defendant replied:

Judge Neilson sentenced the stickler for accuracy to exactly six months in jail.

Republicans In D. C. Plan For Campaign

48 City Delegates At Large Are Chosen For State Committee

Republicans in the voteless District last night moved to perfect an organization for participation in the party's national convention and its Presidential campaign.

At a meeting in the Willard Hotel 43 delegates to the State committee, chosen in recent party precinct gatherings, elected an additional 43 delegates from the city at large.

Thursday night, it was announced, the 86 will meet and complete organization of the State committee by election of officers. The following Saturday night the same body, meeting this time as the District State convention, will name three delegates and three alternates to the national convention and two members of the national committee.

Edward F. Colladay, District national committeeman, declared that the Washington delegation will go to Philadelphia June 24 uninstructed. He pointed out that the District now has 2,000 enrolled Republicans.

During the war he was stationed at Fort Caswell, N. C., then with the Thirty-eighth Artillery at Fort Eustis, Va. He was promoted to captain in 1920 and to the rank of major in 1935.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Louise Bultman, of 3717 Woodley road northwest, and three brothers and three sisters, all of Sumter.

Roosevelt Assured D.C. Delegation

Resolution Calling June 5 Primary Indicates Will Of Party Leaders

President Roosevelt was virtually assured the support of the District delegation to the Democratic National Convention at Chicago July 15 by action of the Democratic central committee last night.

The committee, meeting at the Harrington Hotel, unanimously adopted a resolution calling for primary election of delegates June 5, which was worded in such a way as to leave no doubt that Washington leaders of the party fully expect the delegation to support the President.

The meeting was closed, but Malcolm S. McConihe, National Democratic Committeeman for the District, informed reporters that, among other actions, the committee had elected Russell Balderson as chairman to succeed John B. Colpoys, who resigned last August, in compliance with the Hatch Act, to remain United States marshal.

Hildreth Succeeds Allen

The session also deprived George E. Allen, former District Commissioner and friend of President Roosevelt, of a post of leadership on the committee by electing Melvin Hildreth to succeed him as vice chairman.

Allen has been a leader in Democratic politics here since the Roosevelt Administration came into power in 1933 and has been recognized as acting head of the committee since Colpoys' resignation. McConihe said the committee had not received Allen's resignation as vice chairman.

Walter Bramhall was elected committee secretary and Mrs. Eunice Thomas was named a committee member. McConihe announced that the following had been appointed to the committee by Colpoys prior to his resignation:

Rowland Marshall, Charles Hanowell, Hugh V. Keiser, Robert Burton, Harold H. Shaller, Arthur Schoenthal and Hildreth. Other committeemen are James Beyer, Dr. James Ernest Mitchell, John Locher, Sam Bagnam, Frank W. Cahill, John J. McConnell, Richard Dickson and Balderson.

Calls for D. C. Plank

In another resolution, also unanimously adopted, the committee called for a plank on national representation for the District in the party's national platform.

District delegates, the resolution read, "shall use their utmost efforts to prevail upon" the convention to adopt a platform favoring voting representation for Washington residents in the Senate and House and in the electoral college.

In a letter from Sefton Darr, former president of the District Bar Association, the committee was informed of the organization of the Independent Democratic Association of the District for the purpose of "bringing about an open, fair and competitive election" of convention delegates. The letter, it was announced, was referred to a committee for reply.

Doubtful Over Primary

In a statement to The Post, Darr made it clear that he, as president of the independent organization, is not satisfied that the primary next month will be "competitive." Candidates for delegates are required to post $200 filing fee, while aspirants for committee members, also voted on at the primary, qualify by payment of $25.

McConihe denied existence of an independent group. "There is only one Democratic organization in the District and this is it," he declared, referring to the committee meeting. He said the committee's action was in "full accord" with rules laid down by the national committee.

Darr said his organization was interested only in an open primary with an opportunity for candidates to qualify without "excessive cost."

"Quit calling this thing an election," he declared. "A properly run primary would be evidence to Congress that the people of the District have not forgot the art of self-government."

Invitations to 3,000

He asserted that 100 Democrats attended the meeting of his "independents" ten days ago and that invitations to join the organization, "without dues," had been mailed 3,000 District residents.

Polling places for the primary and dates for filing candidacies will be announced in a few days, McConihe said. It was expected that 12 delegates, with a half vote each, and five alternates would be named.

The resolution calling for the primary acclaimed Roosevelt as the "saviour of the Nation," "the greatest friend of the common people since Andrew Jackson," whose foreign policy "remains irrevocably fixed to its solid base of justice . . . vouchsafed in the teachings of Christianity."

In a separate statement, McConihe declared the committee is "wholeheartedly for the renomination of Roosevelt." Not only, he said, would the convention delegation support the President for a third term, but he predicted the President's "overwhelming" reelection, even to carrying "the quaint New England States of Maine and Vermont."

Winning Cadet Company Gets Trophy Today

30 High School Units To March in Final Review at Stadium

High point in the two-day annual company competitive drills by cadets from seven white senior high schools will occur this afternoon in Griffith Stadium with awards to winners.

Announcement of the winning company will follow a grand brigade review at 4:30 p. m., when 30 companies will march.

The drills began yesterday, when units from Woodrow Wilson, Anacostia, Western, Roosevelt and Eastern high schools took the field. Leading off today's program will be units from McKinley and Central high schools. Approximately 2,000 boys are taking part.

Exhibition companies from each of the schools will drill at 1 p. m., leading up to the grand brigade review. Col. W. M. Craigie, professor of military science and tactics, Divisions 1 to 9, is in charge. The review will be before Col. Frederic G. Kellond, of the Third Corps Area.

The valuable Allison Nailor Medal will be presented to the captain of the winning company. Since the medal is kept in a vault, a replica of it will be presented to the captain later, by the Central Lions Club. Numerous other awards will be made, some at the stadium today, and others later at the individual schools.

2 Capitalites Kill Selves, One by Gas, Other by Poison

Two District residents died last night by their own hands.

Edward Clinton Finch, 44, of 603 Ninth street northeast, was found lying on the floor of the kitchen, a rubber hose leading from the gas range to his mouth. He left a note signifying ill health as the reason for the act.

Mrs. Florence Milligan, 31, of 4234 Wisconsin avenue, mother of four-months-old twins, succumbed to poison. She had been in ill health, police said. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued certificates of suicide.

D. C. Dentists Plan Office Care to Needy

Society Head Raps Tooth-Yanking Done At Public Clinics

The District of Columbia Dental Society has evolved a tentative plan to provide dental care for needy patients in the dentist's own office, Dr. Daniel Lynch, president-elect of the society, told the Washington Council of Social Agencies yesterday at the Y. W. C. A.

Dr. Lynch criticized the average clinic for performing extractions only when the outstanding need was for restoration and treatment. He said the society's plan would call for certification of need by the Health Security Administration.

Dr. George Ruhland, District Health Officer, said more than 33 per cent of patients admitted to Gallinger Hospital needed dental treatment and that 4 per cent were there because of illness due to dental trouble. He approved the Dental Society's plan, but said he favored establishment of dental clinics in health centers for Health Department patients.

Dental defects have been found in 71.4 per cent of District school children, according to Dr. Harry Ostrow, director of dental services in the Health Department. This, he said, represents an increase of 2.3 per cent over last year.

Dr. Willard Camalier, president of the Dental Society, said it would cost more than $60,000,000 to begin correcting dental defects of all children in the United States. For that reason, he said, the American Dental Association favors concentration on dental research.

McGehee Bill Accord Is Sought Here

Business, Labor Leaders Hold Secret Parley on Changes In Idle Benefits

A final move to reconcile differences between labor and business interests over proposed amendments to the District Unemployment Compensation Act was made yesterday at a secret conference at the Harrington Hotel.

With the legislation all but scrapped for the session on Capitol Hill, representatives of the Board of Trade, the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor held the first of several conferences in a last-minute attempt to save the bill. It was the first time all three groups had been represented at a meeting on the legislation.

William Press, assistant secretary, represented the Board of Trade; Sidney R. Katz, of the Maryland and District Industrial Union Council, was spokesmen for the C. I. O., and Arthur Schoenthal for the Central Labor Union.

While no final decisions were reached, the conferences expressed hope that an agreement will be reached this week and that amendments can be presented to the House District Committee with the united support of all interested parties.

Since the failure of the committee to reach an agreement at three meetings last week, business and labor spokesmen have exchanged charges as to which was to blame for the breakdown.

Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, in a statement Saturday laid the blame on labor. Yesterday Schoenthal replied for labor and charged McGehee with being "unfair." He pointed out that the Central Labor Union indorsed the previous McGehee bill.

"Labor has been consistent about more liberal amendments," he said. "We also have approved a reduced rate of taxation, but we have been apprehensive ever since the first McGehee bill was jerked off the House calendar at the request of business groups."

Members of the House District Committee stated after the Friday meeting that a tentative agreement had been reached on all issues except a provision in the McGehee bill which limits benefit payments to one-third of an unemployed person's earnings during the base year upon which his rate of benefits is fixed.

Woman Asks Aid To Locate Father

From the Pacific Northwest yesterday came a request to The Washington Post to aid in locating the 70-year-old father of Mrs. A. C. Fisher, of Everett, Wash.

He is Thomas Claybourne Balch, and is believed to be living in the District.

Police Judge Neilson Called 'Chief Ticket-Fixer' by Seal

Judge George Neilson, newly named to Police Court, yesterday exercised judicial restraint after Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal labeled him "chief ticket-fixer" before the House District Committee. The judge contented himself with saying merely that he had not been aware of this distinction.

"I always tried to use the utmost common sense in adjusting traffic tickets," he added. "My record will show I always cracked down with recommendations for the maximum sentence in major offenses."

Neilson formerly was assistant corporation counsel assigned to Police Court. At the committee discussion yesterday of a bill to set up a Traffic Court, with a full-time judge, Washington I. Cleveland, of the American Automobile Association, suggested Neilson as the ideal man for the job.

"I don't know of any man who has fixed more traffic tickets than Mr. Neilson did when he was assistant corporation counsel," commented Seal.

"Miss Washington" Being Paged for 1940 Contest

'Miss America' Competition Starts Early; RKO-Keith's Opens New Bill Tomorrow; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THE TIME HAS ARRIVED for the Capital's high priestesses of pulchritude to begin trying out the new hair-dos, "Sunday gowns," poise and grace and polishing up whatever entertainment specialties they feel they can bang over to large and difficult audiences. For the first time ever in the spring, the "Miss Washington" competition is getting under way to select a candidate for the national crown in Atlantic City's "Miss America" contest next September.

BELL

Once again, the local quest for a world-beating Venus is under the direction of Al Stern, who has handled the arduous assignment for years on end now. Following the precedent of recent summers, the Washington beauty pageant will be a cooperative affair, conducted in conjunction with the Wilson Line. Final judging will be on the night of Sunday, May 26, in the airy and spacious ballroom of the Wilson Line's new streamlined Potomac excursion steamer, the Mount Vernon.

It is reported that a considerable number of entries already have been received by those in charge. It is further announced that none of the winners of recent "Miss Washington" contests will be among the 1940 entries. Evelyn Foster, last year's winner, is under contract to a prominent ballet group in New York. Tony Mann, Dorothy Parker, Nadine Petrey Bishop and others have indicated their definite withdrawal from competition.

The 16 Roxyettes, from the Earle Theater, by the way, will be breakfast guests of Manager Harry H. Baker, of the Wilson Line, Wednesday at 9 o'clock, to help celebrate the tenth anniversary of the line's operation on the Potomac. They will cut the birthday cake—which ought to cause a mild boom in the cutlery trade. High officials of the District government also are expected to be present for their matutinal ham-and on the pier.

Gradually moving up the inauguration of its new bills a day a week, R. K. O.-Keith's Theater tomorrow morning will break out "If I Had My Way," the new Universal production, starring Bing Crosby and little Gloria Jean, who scored so decisively in her screen bow in "The Under-Pup." Maybe it was a screen bow-wow. Anyhow, Gloria was an overnight hit. Just about a year ago that was—or was it? The companion feature of the new bill will be the new "March of Time" release, "The Philippines: 1926-1946." As we said in one edition yesterday, this subject has to do with the islands under 300 years of Spanish rule and 40 of American—and what may come of it all. It is in 1946 that Philippine independence is scheduled to go into effect.

The Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater has temporarily abandoned the policy of repeat runs of the Earle's biggest hits and for the next three weeks will unspool first-run releases of more than ordinary merit. The first, beginning Friday, will be Boris Karloff in "The Man With Nine Lives," having something to do with the topic of "frozen sleep." This will be followed by Virginia Bruce, Wayne Morris and Dennis Morgan in "Flight Angels," and "Twenty-one Days Together," costarring Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier, respective stars of "Gone With the Wind" and "Rebecca," who recently were seen in the Actors Fund Benefit, at the National, in the balcony scene from their production of "Romeo and Juliet," now on Broadway.

"A Park avenue 'Western'" about describes Jack Benny's new picture, "Buck Benny Rides Again," shot through the sprockets yesterday noon at a preview screening for the guys and gals of the drayma desks. The carefree amusement-seeker will have a lot of fun at this one, due to open at Loew's Palace on Friday. Producer-Director Mark Sandrich, a recent Washington visitor, almost costarred Eddie "Rochester" Anderson in this humorous and tuneful spoofing of Easterners on "dude" and real ranches. Lillian Cornell, cast as one of the "Cameron Sisters," hasn't a great deal to do, but what little she has is worth bending the good eye to.

Mister-Can-You-Spare-a-Dime Note

So the Broadway premiere of "Louisiana Purchase," at the National last week, is a sellout at an $8.80 top!

In Hollywood

Hollywood, May 13.

While Bette Davis is vacationing in Honolulu, she's having stables and a swimming pool built at her valley home. Understand her derstand her boss, Harry Warner, is giving her a horse. Her companion, Bob Taplinger, is not romancing—just keeping her company. Oh, yes? . . . Yes, it's spring, and the Eddie Robinsons are buying more paintings. They did a whole day's sitting for Vogue magazine. Don't you just love Little Caesar being in the middle of our latest fashions?

HOPPER

There's a movement on foot to keep Bradbury Foote, who's just finished "Osborn of Sing Sing" in Hollywood, from going back east to write a play.

Speaking of that, just say goodbye to Louise Campbell who's on her way to Skowhegan, Me., for 14 weeks. I'll bet you dough that producers don't let her stay that long. She's too good an actress—Hollywood needs her.

I love the name of Joan Blondell's new play, "Sex Takes a Holiday." What a title for a Hollywood picture. But what a time getting a star to play in it. Not one would admit it.

Speaking about these strong-armed guys among our extra ranks, one of them went up to Director Eddie Sutherland on the set of "The Boys from Syracuse" and said "You need a bodyguard." "What for?" "Well, if anybody pushed you, you could do that." He gave Eddie a push, and he went over backwards. As he gathered himself together, Eddie said, "If they did that to me, I'd do this!" And knocked him cold. I don't believe that extra will appear in any of Eddie's future pictures.

Laurence Olivier is burned to a crisp at Columbia for releasing "21 Days Together," English film he made with Vivien Leigh. Understand their tour of "Romeo and Juliet" hasn't been so successful. Olivier is a scenery chewer. Our picture directors held him down on the screen. "Romeo" is all his own idea.

Dick Powell is certainly in the real estate business. Couple of weeks ago he opened a block of stores in Long Beach, with the mayor, a brass band and lights. Now he's got a ranch in Monrovia, which they used as a location in "I Want a Divorce." Some time back, he paid $150,000 for a show place in Beverly Hills. Wife Joan Blondell said, "too sylish—I can't live like that." So they bought Fay Wray's home for $25,000, and that's where they're living.

Singing Stars Opening Tomorrow

GLORIA JEAN AND BING CROSBY, who appear together for the first time in Universal's production of "If I Had My Way," opening on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater. Charles Winninger and El Brendel—long absent from the local screen—are prominent in the supporting cast

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, May 13.

THURSDAY NIGHT the Herald Tribune received this dispatch from Beach Conger, its correspondent in Amsterdam: "It's quiet here in Holland—just like around New Orleans about the first of June." The Herald Tribune thereby was able to beat the New York Times to the street with the news that Holland was invaded and had opened it dikes . . . Conger, an American citizen, was born in Berlin—where his father was the correspondent for Associated Press. Beach was stationed in Berlin until last year, when the Nazis asked him to leave . . . Thursday night, with a censor beside him, checking each word to see that no news would be transmitted, Conger sent that message: "It's quiet here in Holland—just like around New Orleans about the first of June" . . . Henley Hill, night city editor, knew what Conger had meant—that the invaded Dutch had opened their dikes. Because in June at New Orleans is when the Mississippi floods start to rise.

MRS. JOHN GARFIELD objects to her husband's assignment to play "The Patent Leather Kid" for Warner Bros. . . . They attended the Ambers-Jenkins fight, and Garfield was very much enthusiastic about the new lightweight champ. "Before I do 'The Patent Leather Kid,'" Garfield stated, "I'll get Warners to hire Jenkins as my opponent in the big fight scene" . . . "Oh, no," Mrs. Garfield corrected. "Before you do 'The Patent Leather Kid'—you'll fight the Warners."

WALTER WANGER is taking Grant Wood, Thomas Benton and Luis Quintanilla to Hollywood to paint the portraits of characters he's using in his next picture . . . Frank Chapman, the singer and husband of Gladys Swarthout, now is under the "silent treatment" because of throat trouble. He's not permitted to speak a single word for two weeks . . . Burns Mantle, the drama critic, has become a member of The Players— the first time in years that a reviewer has been allowed to join . . . Oscar Cox, assistant counsel to the Treasury, is favored for one of the new Federal judgeships . . . Alma Ross, who is Mrs. Louis Prima, will be the new Hawaiian dancer at the Hurricane.

SIR THOMAS BEECHAM, the conductor of the London Symphony Orchestra, now in this country, was scheduled to broadcast an interview for C. B. S. . . . Sir Thomas was shown a list of question—all of which pertained to music . . . How concerts are given during blackouts; how many key men of his orchestra have been lost because of enlistments, etc. "Gentleman, I'm going to speak about the war," Beecham insisted. "I conduct music, but I don't discuss it."

Eleanor Harris, the screen writer, is in New York now, preparing a screen story about the seven Ringling Brothers . . Miss Harris and Louis Bromfield wrote the screen story for "Brigham Young." Darryl Zanuck, mindful of every detail, had a corps of Mormons always at hand to examine every line written by Bromfield and Harris, to assure that it's all accurate . . . The intrigued Bromfield therefore placed a sign on the door: "Quiet. Mormons at Work."

Screen Teaming

Lana Turner and Lew Ayres will be teamed in "To Own the World."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 13 (INS).—RKO isn't going to get John Garfield for "They Knew What They Wanted" for the simple reason that Warners wanted Ginger Rogers for "The City of Conquest" on the swap—and that fell through. No Ginger, no Garfield — So, RKO will have to go scouting for another homewrecker to break up the marriage of Charles Laughton and Carole Lombard in "They Knew What They Wanted," which is now titled "The Other Man." Frankly, I was surprised to learn Warners were angling for Ginger for "City of Conquest," because I thought this costarring role with Jimmy Cagney had fallen to Ann Sheridan. But now I hear it's a toss-up whether Annie goes into the Cagney picture or into Capra's "The Life of John Doe."

LOUELLA PARSONS

In the meantime John Garfield begins his trek back to the Coast by motor May 14—right after his show, "Heavenly Express" closes in New York. He'll start work immediately on his own home lot in "Fiesta in Manhattan," by Charles Kaufman.

Whether Monty Woolley plays the role he created in "The Man Who Came to Dinner," or an unknown gets the part, will be decided when George Kaufman gets out here in a few weeks. He'll confer with Hal Wallis and start work on the adaptation of his famous play. Hal is inclined to believe that the property is in valuable and that an unknown could play the part, but Kaufman isn't so sure.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Meredith Howard, twin of Mrs. Lou Wertheimer and sister of little Mary Howard, will wed J. J. Jordan, insurance agent next month. As Jean Abbey, she has done very well in Washington as a radio commentator; Akim Tamiroff has been sicker than anyone outside his immediate family knows; Madeleine Carroll has lost 14 ponuds on a special calory diet; Binnie Barnes' new hat created such a furore that when she walked into the Grace Hayes Lodge everyone broke into applause; Mrs. James Stephenson, wife of the English actor, goes into the hospital Wednesday for an operation.

Jackie Cooper spends every spare moment cramming for his finals, so he can graduate from Beverly High in June; Tom Brown and Natalie Draper, his former, a surprising twosome at the Beverly Tropics; Jimmie Stewart has a standing date to take Olivia De Havilland flying in his plane every Sunday; Orry Kelly will serialize "Women I Have Undressed" before he puts it into book form; Irene Dunne and Dr. Francis Griffin with Jeanette MacDonald and Gene Raymond at Ciro's Irene and Dr. Griffen sailed Saturday for Honolulu.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Pofahl Is Benched in Drastic Nats' Shake-Up

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Detroit, May 13.—Did a bubble burst when Jimmy Pofahl, the Nats' $35,000 rookie shortstop, was benched today? Is Buddy Lewis being moved back to third base because he was a flop in the outfield? Why was Cecil Travis, author of the finest defensive play around third base since Ossie Bluege was in his prime, moved to shortstop?

POVICH

Bucky Harris says he isn't giving up on Pofahl as a shortstop. And he adds that there has been no complaint with Buddy Lewis' outfielding. But let's you and I read between the lines:

The whole nub of the shake-up involving four positions which Harris will initiate tomorrow is, we think, a maneuver to get Johnny Welaj into the Washington line-up. Stripped of all its politeness, Harris' announcement amounts to that, we think. To get Welaj in there, he had to make four changes.

Why does he want Welaj in the line-up? That's easy. The fellow is simply the best outfielder on the club. Harris is being haunted by the fear that he has been keeping a swell ball player on the bench at a time when there are too few of that type in the Nats' line-up.

In center field, George Case with all his native speed, hasn't been getting to balls that Welaj would have caught in a common canter. Getting off with the crack of the bat is no help if an outfielder is getting off in the wrong direction. Instinctively, Welaj is an outfielder far superior to Case and he concedes little of point of speed.

Welaj has never amassed any imposing batting average since he has been with the Nats, but he has murdered left-handed pitching. And this year after an off-season spent with an ax in the woods, he is bigger and stronger. In his pinch-hitting appearances he has seemed to be the best on the club. Even when he hasn't been getting his hits.

Harris couldn't replace Case with Welaj and let it go at that. He is compelled to keep the fleet Case in there. He's a clever lead-off man, a patient waiter at the plate, and the speed that permits him to beat out infield blows can't be minimized. On occasion, too, he'll give you the long one. Not a bad hitter.

But with both Case and Welaj in the line-up to terrorize pitchers and infielders with their speed on the bases, Harris believes his club has a definite advantage. The Nats' manager, recognizing that he is no power club, is very much committed to having at least a fast one.

Now, then, why move Lewis back to third base where for the past two years he proved definitely he was something of a butcher on defense? Well, that's simple enough. Harris needs his hitting. He's willing to sacrifice something defensively to keep Lewis' big bat working. And Lewis, despite his high fielding percentage in the outfield, was no star there. The truth is that on every hard-hit ball to right field, Harris worked up a great perspiration until Lewis reached it. He didn't have much confidence in Lewis as an outfielder.

Lewis was moved to third base to release Travis for the shortstop job. What about shortstop job? Wasn't Pofahl supposed to be the answer to Harris' prayers for a nimble, cat-like guy who would come up with the balls that might go for hits?

Well, the truth is that Pofahl hasn't been playing shortstop any better than Travis played it last year, if as well. That is no reflection on the kid from Minneapolis, because the only shortstop in the league last year who played a better defensive game than Travis was the Yankees' incomparable Frankie Crosetti.

Pofahl was all that Harris had claimed for him around the bag. On the plays near second base he was, indeed, a cat. His arm is not bad at all. With Jimmy Bloodworth, he stepped up the double-play production of the Nats. But the fact is, that Pofahl was no great shucks at going to his right. Many a hit traveled down that lane this season. With his ability to range so far to his left, Pofahl might have shaded the territory to his right a bit. With him, it doesn't appear to be an incurable weakness.

But Pohahl's batting, that's another thing. His .234 average wasn't doing the Nats much good. The suspicion is that he's a better hitter than that. But Harris knows that Welaj will outhit Pofahl, and that's what it all boils down to. Benching Pofahl and getting Welaj in that batting order. In center field and at the plate, Welaj will cut off and drive in more runs for the Nats than Buddy Lewis will let in at third base. And if you don't think runs are important to the Nats, you don't know the Nats' pitching.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 13.—We accidentally discovered the other day when Ty Cobb rarely goes to a ball game any more. And it is not his love of gold, nor the fact that the caliber of baseball around San Francisco is slightly dull—now that the last DiMaggio has been crated and shipped East.

CONSIDINE

He stays away for the sake of his nerves. The worst punishment one could devise for Tyrus Raymond Cobb would be to chain him in a grandstand seat and make him watch a full schedule. He would have to be carried right from the park to a sanitarium for a complete rest.

For Ty is the country's No. 1 weaving and bobbing baseball fan. In case that confuses you, the weavers and bobbers are those veteran fans who twitch or jerk on every throw the pitcher makes, who have trouble keeping from falling off their chairs when a basehit is made, and trouble keeping their teeth from becoming castanets when the count is 3-and-2 on the batter in a crucial moment of the game.

Having seen the master, Cobb, we are now prepared to release our 1940 rankings. We put Cobb at the top, for his ability to jerk or flinch to the west as easily as to east.

Pressing Cobb, and regarded in weaving and bobbing circles as a "comer" of rare promise, is Jack Lait. Lait is a switch bobber, but apparently isn't giving the art all he's got. Cobb is limp for hours after a game. Lait can shrug it off after he leaves the park, rush downtown and put out a good newspaper.

No. 3 man on our list is Jack Doyle, the odds-maker. Doyle was singles champion of the weavers and bobbers from 1914 through 1928 and now he is trying to improve his ranking by deliberately torturing himself. Cobb and Lait sit a little off to the side of home plate, but Doyle is right behind the screen every day. His ague every time a foul tip hits the screen in front of his face is the best 1-2 lurch any of the bobbers can produce. Doyle snaps his teeth out of their sockets as the pitcher makes his motion, and snaps them back in when the foul tip hits the screen.

The No. 4 bobber, and the only one who puts his art to a utilitarian purpose is Gen. Peyton C. March, a regular communicant at Clark Griffith's ballyard in Washington. Gen. March, a fine looking old warrior with a Joel Cheek goatee, uses his ambidextrous lurch on every pitch as a means of bouncing the ashes off his cigar without flicking them.

The ballyards of America may have others who can match or outdistance these phenomenal performers, but we doubt it. Lurch for lurch, we'll match our quartet against all comers. In fact we'll match our man Cobb against any six challengers.

Cobb, the fan, has the same intense concentration that Cobb, the player, had. We saw him in action Saturday, watching the Yankee-Red Sox game. He sat up on the edge of his chair, in the Ruppert box, his muscles tight, his lips pulled thin and colorless, his eyes two blazing slits of steely blue. We sat behind him for a full half inning before speaking and never once did he take his eyes off Mario Russo, the young Yankee left-hander. His eyes devoured the boy's every move and gesture, and as each Red Sox swung (or didn't swing) as the ball shot up to the plate, Cobb's big frame shook with a giant twitch.

We touched Cobb on the shoulder and the effect was something like shooting off a blank cartridge behind a man tip-toeing into a dark hall at 4 a. m. He seemed glad to have the spell broken for a while. And in his pleasant way he fell to talking about the old days, the absurd differences in the ball he played with when he broke in and the one they used when he quit; the DiMaggios; His golf game, and Ruth's game; and Feller.

"I've seen young Feller and he's first rate. First rate," Cobb said. "But he's no Johnson. Johnson won all those ball games in spite of the fact that we all knew just what he was going to throw us, before he threw it. For a long time we knew he'd only throw a fast ball. Then he learned a curve, but we knew when he was going to throw that, too, for the Washington catcher would always give the fast ball signal first, and if Walter shook his head we knew it was going to be the curve. And still we couldn't hit it."

But it was coming down to the ninth inning with the score close and Cobb couldn't talk any more . . . Any more than one of the players who were a part of the suspense on the field could have chatted. So we left him there, living and breathing every subtle moment of the drama before him, mystically experiencing the deepest emotions of the men he was watching.

Cecil Travis Will Return To Shortstop

Buddy Lewis Given His Post at Third; Welaj Sent to Center; George Case Shifted

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent

Detroit, May 13.—A drastic shake-up hit the Nats today. Four positions are involved. Two infield and two outfield jobs were shuffled. Jimmy Pofahl, $35,000 rookie shortstop, has been benched. Manager Bucky Harris, desperately attempting to creat some success for his seventh-place club, announced the following changes:

1. Third Baseman Cecil Travis will replace Pofahl at shortstop.

2. Rightfielder Buddy Lewis will return to his former position at third base.

3. Centerfielder George Case will move to rightfield.

4. Johnny Welaj will come off the bench to play centerfield.

The revamped Washington line-up will go into effect tomorrow in the opener of a two-game series with Detroit, Harris announced.

It was a sudden decision by Harris, who confessed that until today he had contemplated no changes in the knowledge that the bulk of the Nats' losses could be traced to weak pitching.

His announcement today was Harris' first intimation that he had weakened on Pofahl, the rookie from Minneapolis. "He hasn't been hitting," said Harris, simply. "With our pitching in the shape it is, we need more runs. that's what I'm trying to maneuver by these changes."

The Washington players had no intimation of the shake-up until late this afternoon when Harris, taking advantage of an off-day in the schedule, ordered Travis, Lewis, Jimmy Bloodworth and Charley Gelbert to report to the Detroit Park. Earlier in the day, Harris had announced that there would be no practice.

"What's up?" asked Buddy Lewis.

"I don't know yet," said Harris. "I want to see how you look at third base because that's where you're apt to be playing starting tomorrow. In the workout today, Travis is going to play shortstop, and if you work well together, it

Reds, Cards Struggle 14 Innings to 8-8 Tie

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, May 13.—Starting late because no umpires had been assigned to the game, the Reds and the Cards battled to a 14-inning 8-to-8 tie today before darkness cut short a St. Louis hitting attack featuring three home runs by Johnny Mize and one by Joe Orengo.

Four Cardinal hurlers and five Cincinnati pitchers took part in the 27-hit marathon which, delayed 29 minutes until Umpire Larry Goetz could be called from a day off at home, continued 3 hours and 35 minutes.

Mize clouted his first homer in the second and a two-run blow in the third off Johnny Vander Meer, on the mound for the first time this year. He hit his third—and ninth of the season—off Relief Hurler Mil Shoffner in the thirteenth to give his mates a momentary advantage.

The Final Knot

The Reds came right back in their half with a pinch-hit double and a single to tie the game in its final knot.

Young Johnny Hutchings relieved Vandy in the fourth after the double no-hit star fed another circuit smash to Orengo and a single to his opposing moundsman, Starter Mort Cooper. Meanwhile, the Reds scored twice on third-inning singles by Eddie Joost and Vander Meer and the first of Bill Werber's four doubles. In the fourth, singles by Frank McCormick, Ernie Lombardi and a two-bagger by Harry Craft netted two more.

The Reds drove Cooper from the mound in the fifth with Werber's second double, a sacrifice, an outfield fly, a hit batsman and Frank McCormick's two-run single, and made it 7 to 5 as Ernie Lombardi

Reds-Cards Game Delayed as League Forgets Umpires

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, May 13.—A game between the Reds and the St. Louis Cards was delayed today—for want of umpires.

The contest, scheduled originally for April 23, apparently caught the National League headquarters napping for no arbiters were assigned.

Ladies Day crowd, out to see Johnny Vander Meer perform for the first time this year, was advised the contest would be delayed 30 minutes or more "until the umpire or umpires arrive."

Larry Goetz, located at his home here, rushed to the park to umpire behind the plate. Jimmy Wilson, Reds' coach, went to first base and long Lon Warneke, Cardinal hurler, "pinch hit" as arbiter at the third-base position. The game started 29 minutes late.

"We Just Kicked One"

New York, May 13 (AP).—Ford Frick, president of the National League, said "We just kicked one" in explaining the failure of umpires to be assigned to the Cardinals-Reds game at Cincinnati today.

700 Watch Brescia Win Pitiful Fight

Phantom Punches Gain Decision Over Roy Lazer, Jersey

By Al Hailey

Some 700 persons were witness last night to the saddest spectacle Washington has beheld since the British came to our town and burned down the White House—the sight of Jorges Brescia, 196½-pound Argentine, carving out a ten-round decision over Something called Roy Lazer, 201¾, of Jersey City.

Gorgeous Jorges fought with all the wild abandon of a butterfly, while Roy waged a continuous search for the South American—mainly because gorgeous Jorges was about the only thing in the ring Roy could find to lean on. Referee Harry Volikman kept well out of the way.

Before it was all over, Roy greatly resembled a Zulu war dancer. His face was a mass of blood streaming from countless old cuts, and his missing lower teeth and stringy hair did much to help.

Brescia's victory proves that wonders never cease and, perhaps, that the District Boxing Commission will never learn.

Erwin Was Lucky

The main wonder was that Lazer, who hadn't a professional fight in a year, managed to last the 10 rounds. He was quoted at anywhere from an 8-to-5 to an 85-to-5 underdog at the start—it all depended upon your sense of humor.

Second wonder is that the District Boxing Commission, which is supposed to insure Washington reasonably good fights, permitted such a match to be made. Matchmaker Jimmy Erwin, who saw his gate hit its lowest point since he launched his fight venture here, can consider himself lucky the fans had the patience to sit through the main business.

Personally, this corner thought the fight should have been a draw—it was that bad. The Post score sheet gave Brescia four rounds, Lazer

Royal Business Bows In Inaugural Event At Charles Town

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 13.—Racing returned to the Peninsula, formed by the Potomac and Shenandoah rivers, today and a crowd of 6,000 reported to take part in the sport. The Finnish Relief Fund Purse featured the action and three noses stretched for the wire in a finish that was beautiful to see. However, it did not please the favorite players, because Mrs. J. B. Belk's Walter Light upset C. S. Jennings' Royal Business by a margin of a neck. A head off the second horse came R. A. Bowman, jr.'s Schley Goree. Four others, including a well-played Evening Light, competed in the battle over the 6½-furlong course.

In the rush to make Royal Business the favorite, the fans overlooked Walter Light and the Charlottesville, Va.-owned 3-year-old paid a $15 mutuel. The race was run over a fast track and under smiling skies. The winner turned in time of 1:20, four-fifths of a second over the track record held by Royal Cross and carried the light weight of the field.

Jockey J. Hernandez hustled Walter Light to the front at the first tingle of the starting bell. Schley Goree was closest with Twilight

Tight Relief Hurling Wins for Dodgers, 6-3

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, May 13.—Effective relief pitching by Lefty Vito Tamulis and a boisterous batting exhibition led by Manager Leo Durocher with four hits brought the Brooklyn Dodgers to a 6-to-3 triumph over the Philadelphia Phillies today in the deciding contest of their three-game series.

The Dodgers punched out 11 hits off Ike Pearson and took charge of the game in the last of the fifth with three runs on Durocher's double, a walk, Dixie Walker's single and Babe Phelps' triple. They had tallied once in the first on a double by Charley Gilbert and a single by Walker and added runs in the sixth and eighth.

Hugh Casey started on the mound for Brooklyn and held the Phils scoreless until the fifth when they bunched three runs on Pearson's double, a fielder's choice that misfired, a single by Art Mahan, a fly

Redskins Obtain 200-Pound Center From San Jose

Robert Titchenal, center from San Jose State, California, has been signed by the Washington Redskins for the 1940 season, bringing the total list under contract to 24, General Manager Jack Espey announced yesterday.

A 6-foot-2, 200-pounder, Titchenal is the second man from the squad coached by Glenn "Pop" Warner signed for the coming pro football season. LeRoy Zimmerman, triple threat back, was signed two months ago.

Pacific Coast observers of San Jose's eleven, which went undefeated last year, termed Titchenal a better center than John Schiechl, center at near by Santa Clara who was named All American. Titchenal captained the 1939 San Jose eleven.

Keith Birlem, blocking back obtained from the Chicago Cardinals midway of last season, will be out of the line-up this year, Espey said. Birlem has notified local offices he is going into the Naval Air Corps.

Walper, Peacock Figure in Three-Way Pro-Amateur Tie

Diffenbaugh, Spencer Also In Deadlock

Walper's 71 Wins Pro Sweepstakes; P. G. A. Meeting Set For Fredericksburg

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

A Staff Correspondent

Baltimore, May 13.—The all-District pro-amateur team of Leo Walper and Roger Peacock finished in a three-up tie for first place with two other Washington pros and their Baltimore partners with 69's in the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. pro-amateur here today at Bonnie View.

Walper's one under par 71 won the pro sweepstakes over a field of 18 Washington, Baltimore and Virginia mentors, while Andy Gibson, of the host club, was second with par on each nine for a 72.

The Walper-Peacock team was tied by George Diffenbaugh, Kenwood pro, and John Frederick, of the host club, a third partner Diffenbaugh picked up just before leaving the tee. Cliff Spencer, East Potomac mentor, also used one of the host city amateurs, F. McNally, of Mount Pleasant, to gain the first-place tie.

General Meeting Set

In the "very important meeting" just before the tournament, that was in turn preceded by an executive committee meeting, the only action taken on the recent tournament cancellation at Old Point Comfort, Va., was to plan for a general meeting of the entire Middle Atlantic P. G. A. members, newspapermen of Washington, Baltimore, Richmond and Norfolk, and Chandler Harper, the storm center of the planned tournament. If enough cards are returned from the parties concerned to warrant the get-together, it will be held Monday, June 10, at the Princess Anne Hotel in Fredericksburg, Va., halfway point for most of the association members. The pro-am scheduled at Belle Haven on the 10th will be moved to June 17.

Peacock, Indian Spring Club champion, lowered Walper's 71 with a pair of birdies to post the tying 69, while Leo played remarkably consistent golf to record the only subpar individual score of the day. He three-putted two greens but dropped a 50-footer for a birdie on the tenth.

Spencer Gets Eagle

Cliff Spencer's out nine included two birdies and an eagle on the par five sixth but he had two bad holes and went one over par coming back. Diffenbaugh's out nine included eight pars and a five on a par three, while coming back the Kenwood mentor dropped a pair of birdie putts and was over par only once. The two D. C. pros tied for third in the sweepstakes with their 73's.

Seven teams posted two under par best-all 70's but only the amateurs figured in the prize list. The teams included: Spencer and A. Williams, East Potomac; Diffenbaugh and Russ Hollebaugh, Capital; Walper and Pete Scarla, Indian Spring; Gibson and L. B. Passano, Bonnie View; Charles Betschler, Hillendale pro, and two partners, Bobby Jones and J. Zink.

WASHINGTON

Mrs. Wilda Martin won the Washington Golf and Country Club ladies day tournament, with prizes awarded on low putts for the round, using 31 putts. Mrs. George Roney was second with 32 and Mrs. R. E. Hotze third, with 33. In a five-way tie for fourth with 34 putts each, Mrs. Oliver Quayle won in a draw.

20 D. C. Pros To Compete at Bradley Hills

Invitation Sweeps Scheduled Sunday; Purse May Be $150

Al Jamison has lined up 20 District and nearby professionals for the Invitation Sweepstakes Sunday at Bradley Hills. The pros will each contribute a $5 entrance fee and Edward G. Adams, lessee of the Bradley Hills course, will add $50 to the purse.

If 20 pros play the total purse will be $150, and 60 per cent, or $90, will go to the winner, 25 per cent for second, 10 per cent third, and 5 per cent fourth.

Play will start around 2 p. m. with pairings announced later in the week.

Scene of few tournaments in its short history, the course has seldom been tested by the professional golfers, and thus a new course record is expected out of the local mentors. Wiffy Cox and Leo Walper holed all putts for a 69 there Sunday.

MANOR

Al Treder is planning a novel handicap sweepstakes for Manor Club members, starting Sunday, May 26. Play will run for five consecutive Sundays, and the entries will be allowed to play Sunday only.

Each player will pay a 50-cent entrance fee each Sunday, and half the amount will go toward the day's prizes, and the other half for the windup on Sunday, June 23. On the latter date, the low net scorer will receive a percentage of the total prize fund. Professional Treder expects 100 entries for the tourney.

Bob Bensinger Wins Friends Tennis Title

Dick Williams Beaten, 6-1, 6-1; Sam Doyle Takes Boys' Crown

Bobby Bensinger, 16-year-old Takoma Academy student, defeated Dick Williams, of Episcopal High School, in the finals, 6—1, 6—1, yesterday to win the first annual Friends School Invitation Tennis Tournament without loss of a set.

Williams, seeded second, gave his heavily favored opponent as much competition as he could but though he fought off five match points the Episcopal boy simply didn't have the necessary strokes to even extend Bensinger.

The little National Boys' indoor champion kept Williams on the defensive from start to finish, meeting his every change of strategy with success. When Williams attempted to go to the net Bensinger passed him time and again. And when Williams was content to stand at the baselines and trade long shots he invariably came out on the short end of the rallies.

The final match of the boys' championships, held in conjunction with the invitation event, was even more one-sided as Sam Doyle of St. Albans blanked Cotton Smith, of Friends, 6—0, 6—0. Playing his first tournament finals, Smith was tense and could never get unwound. He clearly suffered a bad case of stage fright and was never able to get started.

Trophies were awarded Bensinger and Doyle by Albert E. Rogers, headmaster of Friends.

June Hanes Captures 2d Leg on Davis Cup In Alumnae Section

Special Dispatch to The Post

Middleburg, Va., May 13.—June Hanes, of the class of 1935, today won a second leg on the Davis Challenge Cup given in the alumnae class of the annual Foxcroft School Horse Show. Miss Hanes, of Washington, D. C., is now riding instructor at Foxcroft School. Her father, John Hanes, was formerly Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Miss Hanes put her mount over the jumps in excellent style in a class of 12 who gave her keen competition. There were six of the riders called into the ring for final judging. Miss Hanes rode with the same grace and skill when she changed mounts and again rode before the judges. That the judges' decision was a popular one was shown by the cheers when the handsome cup was handed to the winner.

Second place in the alumnae class was captured by Mrs. Arthur McCashin, of Green Farms, Conn., and the third place went to Miss Laura Sprague, of Chicago, who also has two legs on the trophy.

Bethesda Nine Routs G.U.Prep By 24-6 Score

Chevy Chase Boys Break 3d-Inning 1-1 Tie With 11-Run Attack

Bethesda-Chevy Chase broke a 1-1 third-inning tie with an 11-run attack, then added 12 more to rout Georgetown Prep, 24-6, yesterday behind five-hit pitching by MacLeod.

Prep struck with one run in the first inning, the visitors tied it up in the third and then came the fourth with the Bethesdans running up 11 runs on five walks and six hits, one a home run with the bases loaded by John Pahlow.

In the seventh, Johnny Shumate repeated Pahlow's act, and Catcher Toms also came through with a homer. Sport Barrett was driven off the mound in the fourth and Catcher Bob Decker went out to pitch for the Prep nine. MacLeod struck out 13 Prep batters to make it an all-Bethesda day at the Little Hoyas' field.

Covelli Shows Best Form in Gym Workout

Gets Rough While Scalzo Loafs; Fight Tomorrow for Title

Unless Petey Scalzo unveils more tricks tomorrow night when he fights Frankie Covelli in Griffith Stadium than he did in his final heavy workout yesterday at Turner's Arena he is in extreme danger of losing his newly acquired world's featherweight championship.

The squatty little Italian from Chicago, Covelli, tore through five rounds with two sparring partners and worked with such ferocity that the manager of one called a halt to the business, complaining Frankie was getting too rough.

Scalzo, who worked three three-minute rounds with Carl Guggino, local lightweight, appeared lackadaisical and took plenty of punishment from Guggino.

The Chicagoan worked three rounds with Billy Banks, the local colored featherweight who put Joey Archibald on the floor here last summer in training, and had Billy in plenty of trouble when Banks' manager asked that the workout be called to a halt. Covelli then sparred two rounds with Ray Landis, Phil Furr's amateur protege who'll make his professional debut on tomorrow's card at the stadium.

Scalzo then took over the ring with Guggino and peppered the Washington lightweight with well-schooled lefts and right crosses. His attack worked with almost automatic perfection, but if Covelli can catch Scalzo as easily with an overhand right to the head and left hooks to the ribs Petey will be a weary fellow when the fight reaches the late rounds.

Scalzo Holds Upper Hand

Scalzo's record, however, and his superior puhch must install him as the favorite. In 74 professional fights since he started in 1936, Petey has won 43 by knockouts, 27 by decision, fought one draw and lost only three. And he has avenged each defeat by beating his conqueror in return bouts.

Promoter Joe Turner, happy over prospects of an $8,000 gate, yesterday said that George Wallace, telegraph mogul at the ringside, had informed him that requests for special wires had been received from New York, Philadelphia, Richmond and Baltimore—indicating widespread interest in the N. B. A.'s title fight.

Maryland Outslugs V. M. I. to Win Wild Struggle, 16-12

Five Homers, Ten Errors Recorded

Mondorf Is Winner On Mound After Parade of Pitchers In 2½-Hour Battle

By Jack Munhall

Out of a welter of 34 hits for 54 bases and ten errors for the two teams, the University of Maryland yesterday staggered to a 16-12 victory over Virginia Military's nine in a 2½-hour Southern Conference travesty at College Park.

Each team slapped out 17 hits, including two home runs by the Terrapins and three by the Cadets as the hard ground of the outfield and a brisk wind blowing toward leftfield transformed three ordinary singles into round-trippers.

In addition the Old Liners were credited with a triple and a double and the visitors with a three-bagger. Ed Stumpf, a left-hander, started for V. M. I. and after surrendering eight runs in the second inning, was left in the game to take the full punishment.

Mondorff Winner

The Terps employed three hurlers, Pershing Mondorff receiving the victory. Mondorff worked the last 4 2-3 innings after relieving Art Woodward with one out in the fifth. Woodward had supplanted Max Hunt, the starting Maryland pitcher, at the start of the fifth.

It was Maryland's fourth victory against three defeats in the Conference, and V. M. I.'s fifth straight Conference setback.

Batting stars for Maryland were Adam Bengoechea, with a homer, a double and a single in five official trips; Hugh Keller, with a home run and two singles in five appearances, and Bob Burns with a triple and a pair of singles in four efforts.

Dale Healey, Cadet lefthander, struck the heaviest blows for the losers with a circuit smash and three singles in six batting turns. "Duck" Taliaferro got three singles, and Paul Shu, the Lexington school's great all-around athlete, weighed in with the longest home run of the day and a single in three tries before retiring from the game in the last half of the fifth.

Maryland, taking advantage of seven V. M. I. errors and hitting timely, never trailed after pushing over those eight runs in the first inning. The closest V. M. I. came was to pull up to 10-11 by counting six times in the fifth.

The University of Maryland freshman nine pounded out 14 hits yesterday to defeat Mount Saint Joseph's, of Baltimore, 13-4, for its seventh victory of the season

Pepco Nine Beats Gas & Light, 6-3

A three-run rally in the third inning yesterday provided the margin of victory as Pepco defeated Washington Gas & Light Co., 6 to 3, in a United States Government League game.

Garvey pitched the entire game for the winners and allowed 11 hits. Pepco got only six safeties off a trio of Gas Light hurlers, but made each one count for a run.

G.W. High Nine Routs Devitt; Murnane Star

Presidents Win, 15-2, As Pitcher Gives 5 Hits and Fans 15

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, May 13.—Coasting along behind the five-hit pitching of Johnny Murnane, George Washington High drove out 14 hits, including a pair of home runs, to swamp Devitt Prep, 15-2, here today. The victory brought the Presidents' record up to an even .500 at four wins in eight starts.

Murnane turned in one of his best performances of the season, fanning 15 and scattering the hits well over the nine-inning route. A walk and two errors combined with a hit to deprive him of a shutout in the eighth, however, when the prepmen tallied their only two runs.

Giants Rap Six Bees' Pitchers To Win, 11-5

Get 10 Hits, Extend Winning Streak to Six; Boston Safeties in Vain

By International News Service

Boston, May 13.—Rapping six Boston pitchers for ten hits, the New York Giants today trounced the Bees, 11 to 5, and stretched their winning streak to six games.

Frank Demaree sent the Giants off in front by blasting a homer with two mates on base in the first inning. The Giants picked up four runs in the third, two in the fourth and two in the eighth.

The Bees reached Hy Vandenberg and Harry Gumbert for 11 safeties, but could not make them count as did the Giants.

Long Hitting Helps Tech Beat Generals, 5-3

Successive Homers In First by Green And Rados Big Aid

McKinley Tech's habit of doing things in succession proved Washington-Lee High School's undoing yesterday at the Little Generals' diamond as the Washingtonians ran up a 5-3 victory.

Tech's Shortstop Green, second man up in the first inning, slammed a home run for the first score, and Third Baseman Rados, next up, came through with an encore to give the Maroons a 2-0 lead.

In the fourth it was two successive triples, by Second Baseman Wilson and Rightfielder Geronimo, that brought in two more for Tech. Two hits, an error and a sacrifice fly gave the Little Generals two runs in the eighth, but the Maroons added another in the ninth to clinch the victory. It was the eighth loss for Washington-Lee against ten victories.

'International' Mat Tourney Set at Riverside Tonight

Some 3,000 Pounds of Grunting Talent Will Be Paraded Before Fans; 12 Matches Slated

Thirteen oversize groan artists, grossing well over 3,000 pounds, will storm a reenforced ring and specially padded mat at Riverside Stadium tonight for a one night "International" tournament at 8:30 o'clock.

A total of 12 matches will be featured and all save the one-fall-to-a-finish-championship final will be restricted to 20 minutes. Decisions will be awarded when falls are not scored.

Cliff Olson, former world's heavyweight championship claimant and a last-minute entry, is the pretourney favorite, and Warren Bockwinkel, popular newcomer here, is one of the dark horses.

Three "dreadnaught" wrestlers who will boost the tonnage are Tor Johanson, 365 pounds; the Golden Terror, 210 pounds, and Reb Russell, 308 pounds. Several of the contestants top the 250-pound mark.

Six matches and a bye will comprise the first round, and three matches and a bye the quarter-finals. The semifinals and final match will follow. The matches will be handled by two hard working officials, possibly Cyclone Burns and Al Bakhsh.

A substantial cash prize and an outstanding Riverside match in June will be awarded the winner, who collects on a winner-take-all basis.

There will be no raise in prices and reservations may be made through Republic 2950.

First round pairings: The Golden Terror vs. Abe Yourist; Ralph Garibaldi vs. Tor Johanson; Henry Kulkovich vs. Tommy Rae; Frank Sexton vs. Cliff Olson; Angelo Savoldi vs. Reb Russell, and Matros Kirilenko vs. Mike Mazurki. Warren Bockwinkel draws a bye.

Eight Thirty Captures Toboggan Handicap at Belmont Park

Brings $4.50 In Feature Of Inaugural

War Dog Takes Down Place Spoils, With Our Mat Showing; 18,000 See Races

By the Associated Press

Belmont Park, N. Y., May 13.—George H. Widener's 4-year-old Eight Thirty, who finished up his 1939 campaigning with five straight victories, made his 1940 debut the same way today in the Toboggan Handicap, featuring Belmont's opening day card.

He whipped seven other horses down the 6-furlong Widener straightaway chute to gallop, under the wire a length and a half in front of Falaise Stable's War Dog, with William Ziegler, jr.'s little Our Mat an easy third, and Mrs. Payne Whitney's Red Dock fourth. Some 18,000 fans turned out for remodeled Belmont's unveiling day.

Eight Thirty, backed 'way down in the betting, got off slowly, as Brookmeade Stable's Search broke on top. Jockey Harry Richards, part of the 127 pounds on Eight Thirty's back, kept him off the pace cleverly through the first three furlongs, then gave him his head, and the son of Pilate took easy command. He finished the three-quarters in 1:09 4-5, just two-fifths seconds off the track record.

The Widener standard-bearer returned $4.50 for each $2 win ticket, and the victory was worth $6.100 to his stable. War Dog was $11.30 for place, and Our Mat $6.40 for show. A total of $109,791 was bet on the race, $59,451 of it in the win pool.

In one of the biggest surprises of the metropolitan spring season, Maemere Farms' Maemante whipped Marshall Field's odds-on entry of Mrs. Punch and Five to One easily in the forty-second running of the Fashion Stakes, for 2-year-old fillies.

Basil James, who completed a "double" in this 4½-furlong dash down the Widener chute, kept the daughter of Ariel-Flamante just off the pace all the way to the sixteenth pole, then let her go—and she did, winning by four lengths in the snappy time of 51 2-5 seconds, just two-fifths off the track record.

Up to today, Mrs. Punch had won three straight races this spring, including The Youthful at Jamaica. The Stimulus filly took the lead in the first quarter today, but couldn't withstand either Maemante or her own stablemate, Five to One, in the final sixteenth mile, and finished third by a head over W. E. Boeing's Levin.

Maemante returned $8.20 for $2, while the Field entry was $2.30 each for place and show. The stake victory was worth $5,325 to the winner.

Woodward Prep Beats Franklin, 11-6

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Md., May 13.—The six-hit pitching of Alan Prosise gave Woodward Prep an 11-6 victory over its foremost rival, Franklin Day School, of Baltimore, here today.

Woodward was held to five hits but made the most of every opportunity and nine walks to run up a big lead. Prosise struck out seven men and was never in trouble after a shaky second inning which saw Franklin score four runs. Woodward plays Sidwell-Friend today at Friends and will meet Sherwood High at the Ellipse.

SPOTLESS, allowed to settle into her best stride, saved ground in the early stages, was taken up sharply to avoid EVER GRAND, gained boldly on the inside approaching the stretch, came out for racing room and wore down EXTRA GOOD. The latter, well placed from the start, came between horses to take the lead in the stretch, but could not reach the winner. SEA FINN forced the pace of GOLDUN, but weakened in the closing drive. GOLDUN set a good pace, but could not stay in the final test. PETEE LAD was well placed to the stretch and stopped. EVER GRAND was close up when he bled and was taken up.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $500. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:20½. Off at 6:21. CLYMENE, steadied along while closest to WAR RUMOR'S pace, came to the inside to take command on the backstretch, drew out, but was weakening at the end. ARTIST, outrun early, saved ground entering the stretch and was wearing down the winner at the end. BRIGHT SPIRITS went evenly while racing wide at the turns. WAR RUMOR set a good pace for the half and weakened when displaced. COUNTER PASS trailed far back to the stretch and closed some ground. The others were outrun.

Selections at Charles Town.

Dear Al:

Charles Town took on a Pimlico air yesterday with awnings and tables on the clubhouse lawn. The Bahr electric starting gate was used here for the first time. Some of the horses who had never seen the built-in stall gate took to it a bit timidly but the getaways generally were good. Jockey Buddy Root, injured at Marlboro last year a few days after Lou Machado was killed, returned to action in this section. Buddy spent the winter in Havana and did enough riding to keep his hand in and then rested at his home in Kansas City before coming East. He expects to ride out this meeting and then take the swing around the Maryland half-milers. Jockey Sammy Palumbo is lighter now than in several years. He can do 108 and is taking his riding mighty seriously. Both Root and Palumbo have families now. Although Johnny Harris shipped in five horses from Fredericksburg, Va., Pork Chops, who usually travels with that barn, failed to put in appearance at the press box. What's the story? Galt Davis was up to see his Spotless perform. Arch McDonald, of WJSV, and Art Brown, of WOL, represented Washington's radio colony along with their charming wives. I understand Arch went for Art's tips and Art went for Arch's tips. Everybody was seen eating later so I guess it worked out all right. The hard winter and the late spring has kept the apple blossoms out in this section and the countryside is worth seeing. But you people don't want a nature lesson, what you want is winners. The bugler here, and a cracker-jack, too, is Abner Rissler, of the American Legion Drum Corps of Charles Town. He has grown up with the track and is now 17 years old. Confucius had a scratch yesterday. The bank roll is $16. For today, he say: Put my deuce on Sedate.

Bill.

First race—Your guess in this field is as good as your neighbor's. Butcher Boy had some education on the big tracks and may be the right one. The Massey entry of Parisan Mount and Oak Leach may be good enough to take down second money. Danzig is reported to be fair sort

Second race—Happy Hostess had plenty of speed around the milers and appears best suited of those assured post positions. I'm going to string along. Small Change comes back to the racing wars in this and will be right there if fit. Sport Heel flashed enough speed to be a factor.

Third race—Levena gets in this with lightweight and exhibited good form on the Maryland ovals. Logical choice in this field. Din comes from a good stable and is ready. Capstick is far down the list and probably would be the favorite if in action.

Fourth race—Remolee raced well at Bowie and may be the one to get home in front of a gang of this kind. Needs only the right handling. Caidon won over good ones last year and was primed on the Maryland tracks. Yankee Lad perhaps is the class but has been away too long.

Fifth race—Erada, on general good form, appears to be ready to turn back these. Any price will be a good one. Wintona is a fair sort and belongs close with this kind. Aufoin always liked the course and is a threat.

Sixth race—Pomary seems to be a standout in this sprint and I'm going to make the Pompey filly my best bet. Abbots Lark was conditioned on the big time and could be a dangerous factor. Way Out for the minor award.

Seventh race—Bubbleworth, on the also eligible list, will be on top of these if sent into action. Sedate was shipped here with several purses in mind and should go well at the first asking. Hurdy Gurdy for the show money.

Eighth race—Elsie J. likes the track and is reported to have her speed. Looks like the right spot. The Swagman is far down the list but will be close if sent to the post. Darby Du appears best of the others.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take Chief Evergreen, Blox and Dohoev.

Best bet—Pomary.

Roman Beats Select Field In Algonquin

Widener Colt Takes Purse at Downs by 4 Lengths; Sets Pace

By the Associated Press

Churchill Downs, Louisville, Ky., May 13.—Joseph E. Widener's Roman defeated pacemaker in last Saturday's renewal of the Kentucky Derby, found the 6½ furlongs of the Algonquin Parkway purse more to his liking today and made a show of a small but select field of sprinters.

Setting all his own pace, the son of Sir Gallahad III withstood early challenges and increasing his margin in the run for home won with ears pricking and something in reserve. Tough Hombre, from the Milky Way stable, which took over the early pursuit after True Star faded, made a determined bid in the run for home, but was no match for the winner and finished four lengths in the rear. Shady Brook Stable's Connaught closed with a rush to grab third money, two and a half lengths further back.

Seven made the issue, with Roman a prohibitive choice. When the $2 mutuels went up it was $2.80 on the Widener colt.

Rated judiciously by Kenneth McCombs, Roman stepped the 6½ furlongs over the cuppy strip in 1:18, the first three-quarters in 1:11 2/5.

N. Y. Exchange Names Harding As Chairman

6 New Members Of Board Chosen In Annual Election

By the Associated Press

New York, May 13.—New York Stock Exchange members held their annual election today and voted into office a new chairman of the board of governors, Charles B. Harding, and six new members of the governing board.

Harding, 41, a West Point graduate and a partner in the exchange firm of Smith, Barney & Co., succeeds Edward E. Bartlett, jr., who completed two one-year terms as chairman.

The new members of the board, who will serve for three years, are Robert Cluett 3d, E. Burd Grubb, Ernest L. Jones, Sylvester P. Larkin, Sidney Rheinstein and Russell E. Gardner, jr. All except Gardner are members of the exchange and partners in local exchange firms.

Gardner, who will represent the "allied or nonmember" group on the board, is connected with the exchange firm of Reinholdt & Gardner, of St. Louis.

The "allied group" is composed of partners in member firms having their principal place of business outside the New York metropolitan area.

There were no opposition candidates. The new board of governors will hold its first meeting next Monday.

Preston King to Be Honored On Retiring From Phone Co.

Preston C. King, assistant auditor of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., will be honored at 7 tonight at a dinner given by 150 of his friends and associates in the telephone business at the Kenwood Country Club. The affair marks Mr. King's retirement after nearly 40 years of service.

Born in Silver Spring, Md., in May, 1875, Mr. King has lived in that vicinity almost continuously. He received his early education in the local schools, later graduating from the National College of Pharmacy.

After serving in the Army during the Spanish-American war, he entered the service of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. in October, 1901, as a clerk in the plant department, in Washington. He was transferred to Baltimore as a bookkeeper in 1903, but, in January, 1904, shortly after the Baltimore fire, he returned to Washington as a claims adjuster. Rising through the various grades in the accounting department, he became chief accountant in 1909, and auditor of receipts in 1927.

Mr. King is the treasurer of Emory Methodist Church and is a member of the Washington Board of Trade and the Association of Oldest Inhabitants of the District

Opening lead: J ♣.

Baldini and Phillips used the Blackwood convention to steer them into six. The most unfavorable opening lead was made, a club; and as Baldini could see he would be sunk if the diamond finesse didn't work, he decided he might as well play for seven as for six.

He won the ace of clubs and ran his spades, watching the adverse discards closely. East threw his clubs, trying to protect his four diamonds and the king of hearts as West strove to protect hearts and the night club. On the next to last spade lead, Baldini tossed his jack of hearts to prevent blocking. This was the situation:

	♠ 4 ♡ A 10 8 4 ◇ 3 ♣ None
♠ None ♡ Q 5 3 2 ◇ None ♣ K J	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ None ♡ K 9 ◇ Q 8 4 2 ♣ None
	♠ None ♡ 6 ◇ A K J 10 ♣ 4

Declarer led the last spade, and East threw the nine of hearts; he could not afford to discard a diamond or he would make up the suit for South with one finesse. Baldini threw the diamond ten, and West discarded a club. Now the Columbia senior led the three of diamonds from the dummy and remulously took the finesse, it held. West discarded a heart. Declarer now played the king of diamonds, and West discarded another heart; the ace of diamonds forced a losing choice upon the trapped opponent. If he let go his heart five, the ace of hearts would fell both honors and the ten would be good for a trick. If he threw the club king, declarer would win the four.

West conceded defeat and the Columbia team chalked up a top score for six no trump bid and seven made.

Fourth District U. D. C. Meets at Strasburg

Strasburg, Va., May 13.—One hundred and thirty-two delegates, representing the twenty-six chapters of the Fourth District of the Virginia Division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, met here Saturday for their annual convention as guests of Stover Camp Chapter.

Numerous State officers, including Mrs. B. C. Baldwin, of Lynchburg, president of the Virginia Division, addressed the convention. The group voted to meet with the Loudoun Chapter in Leesburg in 1941.

Grains Slump, Wiping Out War Gains

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 13.—Grain traders whose pessimism grew with the tide of war sold enough futures contracts today to cause prices of all cereals to slump sharply.

Wheat tumbled 2¾-3 cents below Saturday's close, with May finishing at $1.05⅞@1.05¾ and July, $1.05¾@1.05⅝. Corn lost 1½-1⅞, May closing at 66½ and July, 67⅛@67¼. Oats fell ⅝-1 cent, Rye, 3⅛-3⅜, and soy beans, 1-1¼.

Practically all the gains which were scored following the German westward invasion Friday have been wiped out.

Foreign Markets

London, May 13 (AP).—A sharp rally in British government bonds encouraged support elsewhere in the security market today. Formation of a national government was rated the chief impetus to buying. Domestic rails overcame weakness and most industrial leaders added a few pence. Oils rallied under leadership of Royal Dutch. Gold and rubber issues held quietly firm. Foreign loans moved against the general trend. Sues Canal dropped 5 points to 75.

Paris—Closed for Pentecost holiday.

Liverpool—Heavy liquidation forced cotton futures down 11 to 15 points today. Disappointing action at New York and a sharp advance Saturday in free sterling were bearish influences.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, May 13 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agri.).—Quotations on domestic wools tended to strengthen on the Boston market today and some sales were closed at firm to slightly advanced prices. Good French combing length, fine territory wools in original bags were quoted at 82@85 cents, scoured basis, with sales having been closed at prices on the low side of the range. Sales of country-packed three-eighths and quarter blood bright fleece wools have been closed at 37@38 cents in the grease, delivered to mills.

New Alloy Is Developed For Steel

Vanadium Company's Granial Gives Uniform Results, Bransome Says

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, May 13.—Discovery of a group of new-type alloys designed to assist the steelmaker in meeting more easily the high specification limits required by the automotive, armament, machinery and other large industries was announced yesterday by E. D. Bransome, president of Vanadium Corporation of America. The name "Grainal" has been given to these alloys which act to give positive control and uniform results to the steelmaking process.

By the addition of only a few pounds, in some cases as little as two pounds, of one of these alloys to a ton of steel ordinary carbon steels and the very low alloy steels attain the hardness and other important physical characteristics of more highly alloyed steels, Bransome explained.

"We believe that this new group of materials, if the experimental work that has been done is fully borne out in their commercial application, will make an important contribution to the art of steelmaking," he said.

Ores Available in U. S.

"It is worth noting that alloys of this type may be made from ores readily available in the United States. Equally important, their employment should enable greater economy in the use of higher-priced alloys, conserving them for use in the high alloy steels of which they are basic constituents."

The alloys were discovered by research engineers of the corporation in their constant studies to develop more effective and economical combinations of alloying elements for steels used for machinery and other purposes requiring hardened steels. This particular group of alloys was the subject of research for more than three years before actual field work was started. In the original form, the material was a ferro-alloy of vanadium, titanium and aluminum, but subsequent experiments have shown that variation in the proportions of each of the constituents and even in the constituents themselves is possible within certain limits in producing alloys of remarkable characteristics.

Results Show Uniformity

"For more than a year now, Grainal has been subjected to tests in various of the large steel plants of the country," Bransome said. "The steels turned out in these experimental heats have further been subjected to rigorous scrutiny by many of the larger users of steel in this country, such as the automotive and farm implements industries.

"The results have shown a remarkable uniformity, with the steels produced possessing a hardness and other qualities hitherto attainable only through the use of much larger quantities of high-priced alloys. This degree of uniformity, which would seem to reflect the effect of the alloys in controlling the steelmaking process, is important where high specification limits must be met, particularly in the case of carbon steels and low alloy steels."

10,000-Bale Order Raises Cotton In Final Rally

New York, May 13 (AP).—A 10,000-bale purchase of cotton in the last few minutes of trade, which lifted prices abruptly, climaxed widely erratic fluctuations in the futures market today. Final prices were 3 to 6 points ahead and up as much as 20 points from the day's lows.

Most of the recovery came late in the session when buying credited to either short covering operations or replacement of recently sold out lines disclosed few contracts for sale.

2,000,000th Car of the Year Due to Be Made This Week

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 13. — Automobile production since January 1 will pass the 2,000,000 unit mark by the end of the present week. Ward's Automotive Reports in its current issue says that this year's assemblies up to today numbered 1,917,565 cars and trucks, with the weekly level approximating 100,000.

A year ago at this time the output totaled 1,559,761 and the weekly schedules ranged between 72,000 and 75,000.

Chevrolet, which for several years has been leading in production volume, completed its 800,000th unit of the 1940 model season today. Its production schedule currently calls for 650 assemblies an hour.

Ward's Reports notes an improvement in retail sales with uniformly better weather throughout the country, but it directs attention to the heavy level of field stocks, considerably above normal.

"Stocks of passenger cars in the field, in transit and in warehouse as of the end of March," the survey says, "were estimated at approximately 516,000 units, the highest level ever reached."

The publication reports tool and die shops "now at the height of their activity," and adds that there does not now appear any likelihood that the carmakers will suffer delays because of late delivery of production equipment.

Sharpest Break Since Invasion of Poland Sends All Issues Tumbling as List Drops Sharply on Adverse War News

New York, May 13.—The sharpest break in security values since last September, when Germany invaded Poland, came today as the German forces cut deeply into Belgium and Holland, claiming the capture of strategically important Liege.

The outstanding characteristic of today's financial markets was that all gave way together, even those like wheat, or shares of the war industries, which usually advance as the fighting becomes more intense.

The unpleasant explanation was that the extent of the German victory, thus far, acted on financial circles much as would a peace scare. There was no hiding the fact that in many minds there was raised the possibility of a totalitarian victory—at a price. What this means to investors can be judged by what they did in markets today, and the results:

Here's What Happened

The average for the big board went to a new low for 1940 and its low since last September 2.

All groups of stocks used in compiling this average were at new lows for 1940 with the single exception of the aviations.

All groups of bonds broke down to new 1940 lows.

The break of 2.69 points in the composite stock average was the sharpest since October 18, 1937, the day preceding a panic wave of selling in which the volume exceeded 7,000,000 shares. Volume on the big board today was 2,557,790.

Declines of from 1 to more than 8 points were numerous among speculative leaders. In a few high priced issues, the breaks ranged up to 18 points.

Trading on the Curb Exchange amounted to 480,000 shares, the highest aggregate since September 12, 1939. Losses on this exchange were similar to those on the big board, with one company, Aluminum, breaking 15 points.

Of the 1,020 stock issues traded in on the big board today, 445 registered new lows for 1940. There were 930 which carried minus signs and only 14 advanced.

Pressure was exerted against the foreign exchanges again, with sterling closed at $3.15½, off 14½ cents and the French franc off 8½ points at 1.79 cents. The Swiss franc dropped 15 points.

Steels Lead Decline

Steels were prominent on the down side, led by Bethlehem, off 4⅜; United States Steel, down 4⅛, and Republic 2¼. Prominent aviations, and their declines, included Lockheed, 3⅜; Pan American, 3½; Douglas, 6½; and Glenn L. Martin, 3¼. Central led the rails lower, with a decline of 1⅞. General Motors gave up 4¼, and Chrysler 6⅞.

The collapse, coming when the majority in the Street looked for higher prices, caused consternation. Brokers who held to the bullish side regarded the selling as being hysterical in some cases. There has been increasing evidence of a business pick-up in the past two or three weeks, but investors have paid little attention to indices.

Bonds Move Lower

Listed bonds moved lower today, in much the same precipitate fashion noted in the equities' section. The chilling war reports unsettled the entire bond department. Many issues went year lows. Foreign dollar securities led the procession, with losses of 1 to 16 points, Belgian bonds suffering more than others. United States Treasury securities held to levels about a half point under the previous close. The trading totaled $9,590,000.

German issues were down, while sharp recessions developed in French, Australian and Canadian bonds. Norwegian and Danish securities rallied a trifle. Italian 7s established a new low on a loss of 3 points. Even the Latin-Americans were adversely affected.

Best rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds were generally down, the declines ranging from small fractions to just over a point. Speculative railroad bonds declined all along the line. Some of the better rated bonds dropped.

Nats' Shake-up Hits Pofahl, Costly Rookie

As a polite gesture, Harris asked both Lewis and Travis if they were willing to make the change and when he reecived affirmative answers at the end of the workout he said they would start their new positions tomorrow.

Thus both Travis and Lewis return to the jobs they held last year, before the purchase of Pofahl which caused the Nats' management to find new positions for the pair. With Pofahl looming then as an asset at shortstop, Travis was moved to third base and Lewis was sent to the outfield in an attempt to keep his batting power in the line-up.

Offensively, the changes made by Harris boil down to the benching of Pofahl and the insertion of Welaj in the line-up. Welaj's batting is one of the prime reasons for the move. In his infrequent appearances this year he has hammered the ball viciously in contrast to Pofahl's anemic .234 average.

The batting order which Harris will start tomorrow follows:

Case, RF.
Lewis, 3B.
Welaj, CF.
Walker, LF.
Bonura, 1B.
Travis, SS.
Bloodworth, 2B.
Ferrell, C.
Leonard, P.

Defensively, Harris believes that the new line-up will definitely improve his club, despite the fact that he has found no fault with Pofahl's fielding.

"It's in the outfield that we figure to benefit defensively," said Harris. "Johnny Welaj certainly belongs somewhere in our outfield, because he's the best fly-chaser on the club. Centerfield is his position, and we should get a better performance from him there than from Case. Buddy Lewis made only one mistake for us in right field thus far this year, but Case should do much better job in right than in center.

Against the Tigers tomorrow, Dutch Leonard will be trying for his third triumph of the year. On the mound for Detroit will be Harold Newhouser, the 19-year-old rookie southpaw, who beat the Nats in Washington two weeks ago. The Tigers are currently in a hitting slump with Barney McCosky the only regular hitting as much as .300.

Charley Gehringer is batting a mere .277, Rudy York is hitting only .260, and Hank Greenberg had a .256 average when he was forced out of the lineup last week by a wrenched back while running the bases at Boston. Earl Averill has replaced Greenberg in centerfield and has been hitting the ball hard for the Tigers, in addition to improving on Greenberg's outfield play.

Tamulis then held the Phils scoreless for the last four frames and got credit for his first decision of the year.

Gorgeous Jorges, after splitting open gashes both above and below Lazer's right eye, then gashed open Roy's left eye. He contented himself with breathing ferociously upon Lazer from that point on and rubbing both hands upon Roy's face whereever he could find signs of a gash.

Gilbert Mayo's professional debut as a featherweight was the only redeeming feature of a fight card, the word for which was lousy. Gil took a technical knockout verdict over Tommy Ricco, a tough little Puerto Rican who put up a terrific battle, in a four-round special number. End came after 2 minutes, 40 seconds of the fourth.

In the 8-round semifinal, Maynard Daniels, 189½, wasted no time in scoring a first-round knockout over Teddy Martin, 184½, of New York.

An ever back-pedaling Sammy Magro, 146, of Birmingham, floored Baltimore's Vic Finnazzo, 148, three times during their 8-rounder but was made to look pretty silly in the process of winning an unanimous decision.

In the 4-round opener, Floyd Grayson, 152, colored of Washington, stopped Harry Richardson, 151½, of Baltimore, in 2:50 of the second.

Hoya Tennis Team Beats American U.

Lone victories in the singles and doubles matches saved American University from a complete "black-out" in yesterday's tennis engagement with Georgetown University netmen at the Eagles' courts. The score was 7-2.

Bill Ackerman

On Fishing—

The first broadbill swordfish of the year was weighed in Sunday evening at the Miami Beach Chamber of Commerce Docks. The angler was Walter Waxman, and his prize fish weighed 237 pounds.

ACKERMAN

It was caught from Capt. Bill Partrea's charter boat Floribel II on 24-thread line after a battle that lasted 2½ hours and took the boat from a point off the Miami Ship Channel to north of the Surf Club—a distance of nearly 15 miles.

Much of the credit for the catch went to Capt. Sterling Stuart, with whom many local anglers fish for tuna off Beach Haven, and who was acting as mate for Partrea, just to help out when his regular mate didn't show up. It was his experience on the big fellows that counted, for Partrea, a Key Wester, never saw a broadbill before, either dead or alive, although he is an A-1 boatman.

The swordfish, a large one for Florida waters, is being mounted by Al Pflueger and will be put on exhibition next fall.

According to a cablegram received by Tommy Aitken, Michael Lerner, who is now on the South American Coast with the Lerner-American Museum of Natural History expedition for the second time in his long marine angling career, has succeeded in catching two broadbill swordfish in one day. These great fish weighed 668 and 450 pounds, and were boated off Tocopilla, Chile, where the expedition moved last week after fishing for several weeks at Tulara, Peru.

The taking of two of these large, hard-fighting game fish in one day is considered by all authorities to be the most difficult feat that can be accomplished by a marine angler.

The expedition will remain at Tocopilla for the rest of this month, before heading for the north coast of Cuba for a try at the big marlin there.

The cold northwest wind over the week-end didn't do much toward hastening the good fishing we should be having by this time. However, there is no dearth of reports coming in, proving that it is worth while trying any day you can get away.

Capt. George Horsman's catch of 44 big hardheads for Phil Donnelly and Abe Shapiro is a fair sample of what may be expected any evening at Benedict, on the Patuxent. And, if you will take our say-so, a big enough catch anytime to supply two anglers with all the fun they could want in any one day.

Capt. Ed Bowen, at Solomons, brought in a nice catch from Town Point—caught on oysters. This is the second nice catch taken at Solomons.

Max Chambers tells us they are not only making nice catches of hardheads in the Choptank off Oxford and Tilghmans Island, but there are occasional nice stripers mixed in with them.

The Cards routed Relief Hurler Elmer Riddle in the sixth with a three-hit attack good for two runs, and the game stayed right there behind Mil Shoffner's and Shoun's excellent mound work until darkness won.

Werber Ties Record

Werber's four doubles tied a modern major league record held by himself and 16 others.

In all, 107 men were credited with official times at bat, 54 of them Reds.

All figures on the game, except the final score, go into the record books. The game itself, will be replayed as part of a double-header here August 11.

That yearning to be an old pioneer must be pretty nigh universal in these here parts. As the GRACIE ALLEN "Presidential Special" strained at her Union Station moorings in Hollywood, there was a last line-up of Gracie, George Burns and Cast in their costumes of yesteryear for a final picture. Just as C. B. S. Photographer Ted Allan had his camera ready he noticed a smiling but unfamiliar figure clad in blue sunbonnet, pink shawl and a gingham gown of 1940 vintage, standing in the center of the group.

"Pardon me, Madam," said Allan, "are you a member of Miss Allen's cast?"

"Goodness, no," was the smiling reply, "I'm just Mrs. Henderson, wife of the baggage man—but I DO love costumes!"

A small cocker spaniel named "Lovey"—FRANK PARKER'S dog—held the GRACIE ALLEN Omaha-bound "Campaign Special" a full 10 minutes past starting time. At 10 a. m., with her train due to pull out, Gracie was nervously tapping her shoe on the observation platform. Parker was missing and there wasn't a tenor in the train crew. Parker jumped aboard just as the train got under way and explained that he had been up all night with his pet dog that was suffering from a brain infection and underwent a major operation by Dr. Eugene Jones just before the train pulled out. Fate of the dog is still in doubt.

SYNOPSIS

ELLEN CARLAN has loved Peter Storm since the days both were children together at St. Joseph's Orphanage. Peter refuses to declare his love for Ellen, fearing they would be impoverished on his small salary, should they marry while he is studying law. While picnicking near the orphanage, a storm causes them to take refuge in the old Tucker house, a deserted old mansion forbidden to them when they were children. In a picture they see a man with a face so similar to Peter's that Ellen mistakes it for Peter's picture. In a book they learn the man pictured is Peter Tucker, a Revolutionary War hero. Peter states the house is a challenge and he will never be content with less. Deep in his thoughts, Peter wanders through a tenement district when a building bursts into flames. Three little boys are trapped and Peter rushes to their rescue. Carver, of the Press, interviews Peter. In another section of town prominent John Abbott sits in his luxurious apartment and reads of Peter Storm's linking with the Tucker family, all of which Ellen gave away when the reporter interviewed her, too.

CHAPTER 8

A STRONG MAN struggles against the forces of destiny which threaten him: he rises above his circumstances. Only the weakling lets himself be swept along.

He turned around and leaned his back against the stone parapet of the terrace. The apartment which faced him was spacious and luxurious. Priceless tapestries adorned the walls: each article of furniture had been made to his special order by a master craftsman.

Life, these past 25 years, had been soft and pleasant for him. But he had paid a price for the indulgence.

Envy Abbott

There were men who envied John Abbott, who tried to pattern their own lives after his, that in later years the same rich fulfillment might justify their labors.

They were men who lived in close and daily contact with him—his associates in the law, his friends, his acquaintances at the club. But they did not know him.

They saw in the weary depths of his eyes only the natural fatigue of his work; they could not guess that he had been tired and worn by a constant, futile struggle against his own conscience.

Twenty-five years.

A long, sigh escaped him. He straightened, squared his shoulders as if to throw off the burden which pressed upon him. Nobody knew. Nobody but Cora and himself.

What a surprise—what a startling, appalling revelation it would be if the story were to be told now.

Night Air

Here in the quiet night air, 30 stories above the street, he could almost hear the amazed gasps of his colleagues, the quiet, significant whistles of his acquaintances.

Hear about Abbott, did you? John Abott, of all men, to have let himself in for something like that.

The story would spread like wildfire once it was unleashed. There's no satisfaction in the world quite so pleasurable as the power to pull the props from under a righteous man.

His enemies would wink at one another in proud disdain. Serves him right . . . he was to damnably smug.

And his friends? Tough on his wife and daughter, they would say. They're the ones who'll suffer most.

Mild Breeze

Unconsciously he shivered, though the breeze from the river was unusually mild. They're the ones who'll suffer most.

He crossed the terrace with steps that were slow and dragging. He paused at the entrance to the living room, glanced over to where his wife sat reading in her accustomed chair.

He did not go in. Instead he turned to another door which opened into his study. The room was in darkness.

He went inside, closed the door quietly behind him. Picking his steps cautiously, he walked over to the desk and turned on the shaded reading lamp.

Instantly the headlines in his newspaper stood out in bold, striking accusation before his eyes.

He blinked, as if the sight pained him. But the bold letters were still there, black on white when his eyes were opened, white on black when he closed them. They were stamped indelibly upon his brain.

Mr. Carver of the Press had not minced words. Peter Storm, he declared, linked to old Tucker family. It was a wild, exaggerated statement, of course. The remainder of the article provided that.

But there it was, the dramatic, glaring truth. The truth, not as Mr. Carver of the Press knew it, nor as young Peter Storm knew it, but the truth as only John Abbott knew it.

He picked up his spectacles and adjusted them, to study the pictures more clearly. He looked from one to the other, taking in each surprising similarity.

Peter Storm . . . Jonathan Tucker. A century separated them. An obscure tenement fire brought them together again. As closely together as two identical twins.

What was it the old man had said once? "You can't down a Tucker, John. Mark my words on that. They'll come out on top every time."

Well, the old man was right, as usual. Blood will tell. Here was the heritage that John Abbott had believed buried in a Parisienne cafe.

He did not hear the door open. Not until his wife crossed the room and stood before him did he look up. And then he started guiltily, as if fearful that his absorption in the newspaper might be understood.

"John, dear," she laid her hand tenderly upon his shoulder.

His eyes blurred as he looked up at her. "You've seen the papers, then?"

"Yes, John."

She was a small fragile woman, with a delicate oval of a face which had lost none of its loveliness through the years. She seemed younger, much younger, than her husband.

Her hair was still a rich, deep brown: in the dim light of the room it reflected the same warm tones of the mahogany furnishings. Her fair skin was unlined, save for the troubled frown which puckered her brow at the moment.

"I've known it would happen, Cora," Abbott said wearily. "A man's sins find him out, sooner or later."

"Don't take it too seriously yet, John. The newspaper story is altogether fantastic. There are no facts behind it."

"Not yet. But there will be. The truth will not be denied."

She did not answer. For a long moment there was no sound within the room but the regular, inevitable ticking of the small desk clock.

She stood beside him, her arm still crossed over his shoulder, and she faced the problem with him. For it was her sin, as well as his.

If it had not been for her, he would never have met the temptation.

Presently he said: "I'ts Millicent. I'd give my life to keep it from hurting her."

"I know, dear." He had only put into words the thought which tormented her. They had been young and bitter and terribly ambitious. They had gambled with fate, foolishly and unwisely. But their daughter would suffer for it.

Absently she twisted the ring on her finger. The large diamond caught the light of the lamp, cast a myriad of tiny silver discs upon the ceiling.

They spun about crazily and she blinked, as if to blot out the spots before her eyes, but her mind was too occupied for her to realize that she was the cause of this dizy whirl.

Futile Statement

"Is there nothing to do about it, John?" Her voice fell as she asked the question, making it a dull statement of futility rather than an evidence of hope.

She knew there was no way now of righting a wrong they had done 25 years ago. They had been over this ground many times before.

Her husband's shrug was a weary surrender. "I suppose we could run away from it. Plead ill health and take a villa in France for a year or two."

"I know; I know. We've got to face the thing, straighten it out in some way. But how can we escape the publicity? It's front page news now."

To Be Continued.

Mrs. Hughs Easley, of St. Louis, the mother of eight children, was yesterday given the title, "Mrs. Unemployed American Mother," by the National Women's Conference on Unemployment. Convention Deadlocked Over Choice Of Delegate to See Roosevelt; Women Seek Price of Dinner Ticket

The 200 Daughters of the American Depression sang of "Solidarity" loudly at their convention here yesterday. But 3-year-old Irene Easley, daughter of "Mrs. Unemployed Mother," slept and maybe dreamed, stretched out on a row of hard chairs in back of the hall.

Maybe her mother, Mrs. Hughs Easley, 3716 North Twenty-first street, St. Louis, Mo., a tall, gaunt woman whom the convention adjudged as typifying depression sufferers, will see the President today.

Who will see him caused the convention to adjourn in a dither of motions, amendments and confusion yesterday afternoon. The controversy arose when Workers Alliance President David Lasser announced that the President would see him and one delegate.

Meanwhile most of the women did not know where each could get 75 cents to attend the "Relief Dinner" to be held at 6:30 p. m. today in the National Press Club auditorium.

The meals, incidentally, will be on the relief formula, one costing 5 cents to prepare, the other 10 cents. The women were asked how many could afford to pay the 75 cents, which, a delegate explained, had to be charged for the fare in its environment.

Not half of the 200 women signaled, by raising hands, that the price could be raised. One rose to inquire if they might come in after the meal. Mrs. Roosevelt will be there and, it was announced, someone will wear a $350 gown. It was not said who. But the women wanted to attend and see all this. The question was left hanging in the cigarette smoke that filled the room.

Earlier, the delegates went to the Capitol and saw Senator Charles L. McNary (Republican), of Oregon, and Senator Alben W. Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, about the outlook for relief.

Lasser quoted Barkley as saying that the wage cuts by feminine WPA workers "came from Administrator Warrington's office."

Mrs. Easley, "typical unemployed mother," said she gets $58 relief money a month for groceries for her incapacitated husband and eight children and $10 for rent money. They "see nothing ahead," she declared, and has no "particular feeling about politics."
